ARTIFICIAL TEETH PERFECTED!—T. J. & H. J. CHANDLER have purchased the exclusive right of Beaver county to use Dr. Stuck's Patent by which they can put up Vulcanite as thin as Gold Plate, with a beautiful enameled polish; and so light and elastic as to perfectly adapt itself to the mouth; obviating all that clumsy and bulky condition, so much complained of heretofore; and lessening their liability to break 100 per cent. Indeed, no one seeing it would be willing to wear the old style plate any longer than they could conveniently get them exchanged. All branches of Dentistry performed in the best and most substantial manner. In filling teeth with gold, etc., we challenge competition from any quarter, and can refer to many subjects whose fillings have stood between thirty and forty years. Among the number [illegible] will exhibit fillings we inserted some 15 years ago; the teeth as perfect as the day they were filled. Laughing Gas prepared on a new principle, freeing it from all unpleasant and dangerous effects, making the extraction of teeth a source of pleasure rather than of horror and pain. Prices as low as any good dentist in the State. Office at Beaver Station, Rochester Pa

SELECT MISCELLANY.

Dr. SPENCER'S GREAT CRIME.

A STORY TOLD BY A PHYSICIAN.

I was sitting in my office half dozing over an interminable article on defective nutrition in the last Medical Review.

The fire in the grate was low, the night was stormy, and the clock was at the stroke of eleven. I was just about to turn off the gas and retire, for, being a bachelor, I slept in a room connected with my office, when there was a pull at the bell.

I started up suddenly, for this was something new. Middlebury was a decorous sort of a place, and people usually managed to be taken sick at seasonable hours.

Old Mrs. Jerome had been threatening to die for the past ten years, and at every visit I paid her she solemnly informed me that when the decisive moment had come she desired me to be present. But as nothing ailed the old lady beyond now and then indigestion from too much high living, I had never yet been called upon to be present at her death.

Now, I thought, it must be old Mrs. Jerome is going.

I took up my night lamp and went to the door. A strong gust of damp, sleety wind nearly extinguished the light, but shading it with my hand, I dimly discovered the figure of a woman. I asked her to come in out of the storm, but she declined with a gesture of impatience.

"You must come out," she said, in a sharp decisive voice, "and be quick about it!"

I put on my overcoat with demur: locked the surgery door, and stepped out in the storm. As I did so the woman laid a firm hand on my arm, and said:

"Dr. Rockwood can you keep a secret?"

"I think so, madam."

"Swear it."

"Is this secret of yours of a professional character? That is, is it anything you wish to confide to me as a medical man?"

"It is."

'Very well then, I swear it."

"That is right."

A man respects an oath, though why he should is a mystery, since men's mouths are running over with them.

"Where will you have me go."

"To Clifton House, to see the mistress."

Clifton House was the old mansion recently taken by Doctor Spencer, a stranger to every one in Middlebury. Spencer was a tall, dark, rather distinguished looking man who hung out his sign in the village only a few doors above mine, but as yet he had got but little practice.

He was unsocial in the extreme, avoiding his neighbors persistently, and when he did speak it was in such a curt, half savage way that one was not likely to attempt to prolong the conversation.

The doctor had a wife, it was said, but no one ever saw her. She was an invalid, and Miss Melrose, a friend of the family, presided over the establishment and sat at the head of the table.

Miss Melrose was yet beautiful, and won the admiration of all who visited the Clifton House by her grace of manner and fascinating conversation.

"As we walk along," said my companion, "let me explain just what is necessary you should know. My mistress is very ill."

"I beg your pardon—is it Mrs. Spencer or Miss Melrose?"

She laughed bitterly.

"Miss Melrose? I would stab her to the heart sooner than own her as a mistress. My mistress is a lady—noble, royal and gentle birth. It is an honor to serve my mistress."

"And she is ill! How long since?"

"Ever since she married him—curse him," she muttered in a fierce tone; "but I must not get excited. I must tell my story, or rather hers.

"Two years ago, through the desire of her dying father, Alice Herndon became James Spencer's wife. Before that she was a healthy blooming girl, but immediately after this marriage her health began to fail.

"Do you see anything very strange in that?"

"Not necessarily."

"Let me enlighten you further. Dr. Spencer was at one time engaged to Miss Lucille Melrose, but he broke the engagement and married my mistress instead. Miss Melrose was as poor as Job's turkey. Miss Herndon was an heiress, and Dr. Spencer was deeply in debt and hard, pressed by his creditors.

"Do you see anything very singular in that!"

"Perhaps; go on."

"When my mistress married Spencer she was only seventeen, and she had been taught to obey her father in everything. She was a gentle, affectionate child, and it would have been easy for Spencer to have won her love. But he did not care for that. It was her money he wanted. It paid his debts and bought him fast horses; it set his table with nice costly dishes, and put it in his power to keep Miss Melrose robed like a queen. And all this time my mistress had been slowly but surely sinking. And look you Dr. Rockwood, I believe she is not dying of disease, but of,"—here she lowered her voice to a whisper as she spoke the word—"poison."

"Impossible! This is a grave charge."

"Of poison given by her husband, who, at her death, would have sole control of her property and be free to marry Miss Melrose. There is no time to explain to you in detail the thousand and one circumstances which have led me to the belief, for we are almost at the door. It is never the case that Miss Melrose and Spencer are out at the same time, or I should have called another physician before; but to-night they are called away by the death of Miss Melrose's sister and will not be back till to-morrow. With the consent of my mistress, I came for you, and Oh! Dr. Rockwood, I pray you save my dear mistress. I nursed her when her mother died and left her a helpless infant; and all through her innocent youth she was like an own child to me and now to see her fading hour by hour before my eyes! Good heavens! if I new beyond a doubt that he was guilty, his life should pay the forfeit."

I was already begining to feel a deep interest in Mrs. Spencer, although I had never seen her, and like her old nurse, I was inclined to feel a great animosity for Dr. Spencer.

Mrs. Spencer received me in her bed chamber. It was on the second floor, and was furnished in exquisite elegance. Everything in the room bespoke the taste and delicacy of the occupant. The warm air was fragrant with a faint odor of hellitrope, and glancing around I saw the purple blossoms and green leaves in an alabaster case on the ledge of the south window.

She was a woman who, when once seen, could never be forgotten. I have met in my life many beautiful women, but never one so lovely.

She was tall and slight, with a purely oval face, liquid brown eyes, and a dash of hectic in her cheeks, which is never seen in perfect health.

She received me, as I knew she did every body, gracefully, and though there was a slight embarrassment in her manner when I spoke of her illness, she answered my professional inquiries without hesitation.

As for myself, I laid aside all false delicacy, and questioned her plainly as to her symptoms. Mrs. Hurd, her nurse, remained in the room, and added many little important items of information.

When she spoke of her husband it was with a sort of hopeless sadness which distressed me greatly.

Not a breath of suspicion against him in her answer to my questions, and I felt sure that at present she knew nothing of what Mrs. Hurd had such serious apprehensions. I was glad it was so, for, with her finely strung organization, it might have produced serious results. I made my examination of the patient as closely as I could, and drew my own conclusions. I could have sworn that Mrs. Spencer daily swallowed arsenic in small quantities, and the deadly drug was telling fearfully on a constitution never very robust.

She said, answering my questions, that she had no physician except her husband. He had thought himself better acquainted with her case, and therefore better qualified to treat it. He never left medicine with her to take: he always brought it fresh from his office, and administered it very promptly.

There was little enough I could do in such a case. Anxious to do everything, the very circumstances of the affair left me nearly powerless.

A charge of such nature, of course, excited a suspicion every one would at once set it down as professional prejudice; and if I could not substantiate my statement the doctor could make me pay dearly for such a slander uttered against him.

The only dependence seemed to be in Mrs. Hurd. To her I unbosomed myself freely. I told her without reserve that I believed Dr. Spencer was killing his wife with slow poison, and besought her to be constantly on the watch to save the victim, and to discover some proof by which we could fasten the guilt upon him.

She smiled grimly and promised obedience. I gave her a powerful antidote for the poison I suspected, and went home perturbed and anxious in mind. I did not sleep that night, and all the next day I was in a fever of excitement. A ring at the bell made me tremble—a step on the gravel outside my office stopped my breath, and I hardly knew what I expected to hear, and yet I felt sure that before I slept I should hear something.

And now I must tell the story as it was told me.

Dr. Spencer returned home in the morning after my visit to the Clifton House. He looked wretchedly, the nurse said—appeared gloomy and depressed. Miss Melrose came with him and was decorously sad over the death of her sister. Women of her stamp always mourn to perfection. They neither overdo nor underdo the thing, as women of feeling are likely to do.

Dr. Spencer came at once to his wife's chamber. He thought she looked ill, prescribed a cordial at once, saying that he would go and fetch it.

"You are always ordering cordials for her," said Mrs. Hurd, musingly. "Why not take somthing yourself.—You look like a ghost."

He eyed her keenly, but replied composedly:

"I think I will take some of the cordial myself, for I do not feel quite well. Alicia, dear, shall I bring it here and drink your health?"

Mrs. Spencer smiled in assent—she never disputed her husband—and he went out. Presently he returned with two glasses. Both contained liquid, colorless and inodorous. Mrs. Hurd was watching him with her heart in her throat; for, as she told me, she felt that the decisive moment had come. There was something in the gray palor in the doctor's rigid face that told her of a desperate purpose in the man's soul.

He lifted the glass on the right of the tray and gave it to his wife.

"Drink it, dear," he said, "it is a panacea for all evils. I am also going to take a glass of it," and he pointed to a glass still on the tray.

Mrs. Spencer accepted it, and was putting it to her lips, when Mrs. Hurd interrupted.

"If you will bring her a tumbler of water, doctor; Mrs. Spencer complains that the cordial leaves a bad taste in her mouth, and my bones are so full of rheumatism that it nearly kills me to go down stairs."

The doctor turned and bent on her a look as if he would read her through. But she kept her face impassive. If he had any suspicions, her manner quieted them, and putting down the glass he left the room.

Then Mrs. Hurd changed the position of the glasses.

When he came back—and was gone but a moment—the nurse stood just exactly where he had left her, and Mrs. Spencer was lying back in the chair with her eyes closed.

Again he lifted the glass—this time it was the one intended for himself—and placed it to the lips of his wife. She drunk the contents, swallowed a little of the water he had brought her, and thanked him in her sad, but sweet way.

"Now for my own cordial," said he, with affected gayety. "I indulge myself in something a little stronger," and as he spoke he tossed off the mixture.

"It made me stone cold to my fingers' ends to see him do it," said Mrs. Hurd, relating the circumstance to me; "but heaven is my witness, I felt not a single twinge of conscience. I argued like this:

"If it was a simple cordial, as he had said, it would do him no harm; if it was poison, his blood would be on his own head!"

He went to bed half an hour afterward, complaining of fatigue. In the morning they found him dead.

I was called to the post mortem examination, and we discovered in the stomach of the deceased a sufficient quantity of the deadliest poison known to modern science to kill half a dozen men.

My brother physicians agreed that the man was insane, and had probably taken the dose in one of his unsettled fits of mind. I did not dispute them, but even before Mrs. Hurd told her story I had my own theory in regard to his death.

There was no public exposure, however. Mrs. Hurd and I agreed that it would profit no one to make the wretched affair public, and so we kept our own counsel.

Miss Melrose, in spite of my conviction that she had been an active party in the conspiracy against Mrs. Spencer's life, I could not help pitying. Such a miserable, worn and haggard face as her's I have never seen; and when they buried Dr. Spencer she was confined to her chamber with brain fever.

I attended her in her illness, but although she recovered her health she never was herself again. She was a harmless maniac, whose delight was in gathering flowers and decorating the doctor's grave with them.

She is living still, and she still gathers flowers and lays them on that grave, singing to herself meanwhile a sort of low incantation which no one ever pretends to understand. Not until Mrs. Spencer had been many years my wife, and the faithful Mrs. Hurd slept under the violets, did Alicia ever know the perfidy of her former husband.

And when I told her, after the first shock was over, she crept into my arms and whispered:

"But if it had not been for James' crime, I should not have found you, Herbert. So good sometimes does come out of evil."

Mysterious Skeleton Clock.

A watchmaker in an Illinois town has constructed a peculiar timepiece, and the local journal describes it as follows: It is simply a dial-plate with two hands—an hour hand and a minute hand. The dial is twenty-four inches in diameter, with a large opening in the centre. The minute hand is twelve inches in length, and the hour hand nine and a half inches, fastened in the centre of the dial upon a small pivot. That is all that can be seen by looking at it. By looking closely on the large ends of the hands, or ends toward the centre of the dial, and on the reverse side, you will see what appears to be weights, intended to balance the hands, but which in reality contain the secret of the movement of the hands. Within these small weights are miniature works like those of a small watch, strong enough to control the hands. A person may whirl the hands until they shall spin around like a top, but each will invariably return to its proper place, and indicate the time of day correctly. The hands may be taken off and laid away for an hour or two hours, or ten, or any length of time, and upon being replaced on the pivot they will instantly point to the precise hour and minute.

There is no electricity or anything of that sort. The dial hangs by a tiny hook from a nail. It may be suspended by a string, or held in the hand, and the movements of the hands are all the same. The hands do not move with the regularity and precision of those of a regulator, but the correct time of day is always indicated by this strange timepiece will agree exactly. It is really a remarkable piece of workmanship, and excites much comment. Nothing is seen by looking at it or examining it, save the rim of the dial or the hands. That is all; and when they move so correctly and mark the time of day it seems as though some unseen spirit must represent and impel their movements.

☞ A decidedly new sensation is promised us on the 12th of next August. The famous M. Plantamour, professor of astronomy at Geneva, Switzerland, has discovered a new comet which, it is declared, exceeds in size any similar meteor hitherto known of. By the elaborate calculations of this learned observer, the new comet is darting directly toward our globe with prodigious velocity and will come into collision with it on the 12th of August, as aforesaid. The approach of this terrific object will be heralded by an extraordinary degree of heat; and the catastrophe cannot possibly be avoided unless by a deflection, not now to be prognosticated, produced by the comet impinging on the attractive scope of some other heavenly body. Let us hope and pray for the "deflection," and at the same time cultivate our faith in the theory that comets are merely bodies of luminous gas, which, even if coming in collision with the earth, could do no very extensive damage.

☞ They tell of a very remarkable woman living at the San Gabriel Mission, California, who claims to be one hundred and thirty-two years old. She was a mother at the time the Mission Church was built—one hundred and two years ago. Her hair is as white as driven snow, but her eyesight is as keen as that of a child, and her step as firm as that of a woman a century younger. She is an expert as a worker of embroidery, and executes the finest work without the aid of glasses. Every day, weather permitting, she may be seen in the fields or orchards near by her residence, busy at work with her needle. A specimen of her handwork was exhibited in the Industrial Department of the last agricultural fair, and drew forth the admiration of all those who saw it. Her memory is unimpaired, and she converses vivaciously of events of the past appertaining to the San Gabriel Valley—her world.

☞ The Banking Committee of the House has reported a bill making it obligatory on bank officers to stamp any non-genuine National Bank or Treasury note that may come into their hands "counterfeit." The only objection likely to be made to the measure has been made. It is that genuine notes may be so marked by ignorant clerks who are not able to distinguish between counterfeit and genuine. This is not likely to be done often, and when it is done the only harm that arises can be remedied by isuing another note. Apropos of such a law the Evening Post tells a good story about a noted gambler who did not maintain the truth of the old adage among thieves. He had a twenty dollar note, and went up to the cashier of a bank, asking him if it was genuine. It was handed back with the reply "No, Sir," and "counterfeit," stamped in large letters across its face. He intended to pass the note along whether counterfeit or not, but thought he would ascertain its character before taking any unnecessary trouble. His game was blocked by the cashier's act, and he demanded between several oaths why the former had ruined his money in that manner. He was courteously answered that a law of the State required it. He departed raining maledictions on both the officers and State law. We presume the only persons who will be inconvenienced by the new law are those of virtue as easy as the person.

BIOGRAPHIES.

The Late Leander Maclean, Esq.

Notice has already been given in the public prints, of the death of this estimable and distinguished gentleman.

But the trustees of the Monticello Seminary, of which he was one, at their late meeting; the first they have had since Mr. Maclean died; have felt constrained to give utterances, to some distinct expression of their high estimate of his worth, and their appreciation of his services in connection with that institution.

We accordingly find upon their records the following minute, which was cordially and unanimously adopted by the board, viz:

"The Reverened Dr. Norton, by request of the Board, presented the following paper, with reference to the death of Leander Maclean, esq., which afflictive event took place at his residence in Monticello, at 5 o'clock, a. m., Sept. 11, 1871.

"Mr. Maclean was elected a Trustee of this Institution, Dec. 2, 1862. In selecting him for this important trust, the Board were governed by their high estimate of his character, intelligence, sound judgment, business capacity, efficiency and zeal for the cause of Christian education.

"In all these respects, they found the fulfillment better and greater than their expectations, large as they were. He proved himself a treasure to the Seminary. We valued his counsels most highly; delighted in his genial, christian companionship, and most sincerely mourn his loss.

"We tender to his widow and orphan children our profound sympathy."

With this high estimate of the qualities of this good man, so cordially and unanimously expressed by those who have had the best opportunities of judging, we might, perhaps, desist from adding anything.

But in casting our eye over his Journal, in which, for many years, he was in the habit of recording the daily transactions of his life, we collate a few additional items, which we think may be of public interest:

Mr. M. was born June 25th, 1825, in Beaver county, Pennsylvania. His father was Rev. Wm. Malcean, who was a native of Great Britain, and educated at Oxford. He was a Calvinistic Presbyterian, and, preached in Derbyshire and Kirby Louisdale, in Westmoreland county, England. In 1820, he removed to the United States. His mother, Abigail Clark, was a grand daughter of Abram Clark, of New Jersey, one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence.

In the winter of 1837, the father having had a stroke of apoplexy, was disabled from preaching. He consequently gave up his pastoral charge at Beaver, and went South for his health. His family followed him in 1838, and located at Clarksville, Ark. In 1844 the father died, and Leander, the eldest, took care of, and supported his mother, four sisters, and a brother. He went to merchandizing when only eighteen years of age. In 1848, his mother died of consumption. He promised her, on her death-bed, to watch over and to be a father to the orphan family, which promise he faithfully kept.

In Nov. 1849, he was married to Miss Minerva M. Street, and the following year he sent his youngest sister to Monticello Seminary. In 1852 he moved to California—taking with him his three elder sisters. He went by New Orleans and Panama, at great expense and hardship, of which no[thing] [illegible] Two years afterward [illegible] with the youngest sister, went to California, where Mr. M. had a house ready for them at Placervill, El Dorado county.

He was the only man in the city who closed his business house on the Sabbath. He was cursed by some and made sport of by others. They told him "no man could succeed, and not keep open on Sunday, as that was the principal day of trade with the miners. His reply was, "When I come to die, I shall feel quite as well satisfied as though I had done business on the Lord's Day." He and the Rev. I. S. Diehl organized the first temperance society, at Placerville, in the fall of 1853.

Mr. Maclean's health was always delicate, having heart disease from a child. In 1854, he had an attack of pneumonia, from which he never fully recovered—leaving him with a cough. His physician advised him to exchange climates, and have some business that would keep him out of doors. Accordingly, in June, 1856, he left California for Illinois with his family and settled down upon the farm at Godfrey, where he finished his days.

Although a Christian from his youth, and keeping up family worship from the time of his mother's death, Mr. Maclean did not unite with any church until January, 1859, when he joined the Presbyterian church at Monticello. He was connected with the Sabbath School in Monticello eleven years, and was eight years Superintendent. Always prompt in attendance, it was a great grief when ill heath compelled him to resign, in June 1868. was elected an Elder in the church the year before he died. He leaves a widow and four children—two sons and two daughters, from nine to sixteen years of age—and only one surviving sister, in California, all the rest having gone before him.

His personal history was calculated to awaken an interest in behalf of widows and fatherless children; and they always receved the kindest attention.

During the last six months of his life his sufferings were great, sometimes extreme. But he bore all with Christian fortitude. He talked calmly to his children, and said he was ready to go; his only regret being, to leave his wife and children to struggle alone without him. The last time the compiler of this memorial visited him was the day before his death. On entering his room he discovered a group of children at his bedside. They were singing that beautiful hymn, so often given out by him in the Sabbath School.

"Shall we gather at the river?"

It was sung with an earnestness and feeling, such as we have seldom witnessed; and seemed to be as heartily responded to, by the departing saint. They sung him down to the river's brink. He soon crossed over, and has disapeared from our sight, to be greeted, no doubt, with holier and sweeter songs upon the other side.

But this article has already exceeded in length, what we originally intended, though many things remain unsaid. May we all profit by these brief memorials of the life and death of a good man. C.

[From the Fond du Lac (Wis.) Journal]

NEWSPAPER CHANGE—A VETERAN JOURNALIST.

For several days we have been in possession of the fact that Mr. Edward Beeson had disposed of his interests in the Fond du Lac Journal, to Mr. Michael Bohan, his partner, but as we desired to give the editorial record of the veteran craftsman, no public mention has been made until now. Understanding the interest with which sketches of veteran Editors and Printers are read by the craft, we have resorted to various tricks to find out the following in relation to Mr. Beeson:

In 1833, at the age of 17 years, Edward Beeson commenced learning the printer's trade, with one A. Logan, in the little town of Beaver, Pa. In October, 1834, he bought the office and entered upon his editorial career, of about 38 years. The name of his first was Democratic Watchman. He was a warm supporter of President Jackson's administration. In 1835 he sold the Watchman, and from that time until 1839, he was not editorially connectad with any paper, but was employed, as a printer, most of the time, in Cincinnati or St. Louis. He was a compositor on the Louisville Journal, under Geo. D. Prentice. In the fall 1839 he married Miss Susan E. Bell, of N. J., and the same season became Editor and Publisher of the Findley (Ohio) Courier—Democratic—of course. He managed the Courier in an able and satisfactory manner, until the spring of 1841. In 1842 he came to Fond du Lac. For a number of years he was an honest farmer, in which calling he succeeded better than modern printers would be apt to succeed. One day he listened to an earnest appeal from a Fond du Lac editor to help him out of a hurry. The old printer appetite —and it is as strong as any appetite can be—returned, and almost before he knew what he was about, Mr. J. O. Henning had sold him a half interest in the Journal. This was in the spring of 1847. The paper had been started the fall before. Nearly all the time until 1853, Mr. Beeson was connected with the paper. W. C. Dodge and J. F. Eastman being among his partner's. Part of the time he was sole manager. About a year, from June 1853 until the next summer, he was in partnership with M. J. Thomas in publishing the Fond du Lac Union. In 1857 the Journal was started again, by Dr. J. Beeson, a brother of Edward, and V. B. Smead. In 1858 the Union and Journal were consolidated and the name changed to Democratic Press.

In 1862, Edward Beeson bought the Democratic Press, with K. Flint, who, sold his interest to a Mr. Staunchfield. After conducting the paper a year and a half, Mr. Beeson sold to A. P. Swineford, now of the Marquette Journal who run it, part of the time as a daily, until 1856, in the fall, when it suspended. When Mr. Beeson left the Press he expected it was the finishing up of his newspaper business, but in May, 1867, we see him wandering home again breathing life into the slumbering Journal. He started it, then, as a seven column paper. In October, 1869, he enlarged it to a nine column paper. About a year ago he sold a half interest to the present editor and proprietor, and last week, as stated, he shook the newspaper dust from his feet again, having previously disposed of his interest in the job office.

As will be seen by the above, Mr. Beeson begun his career as a printer forty years ago. Nearly all of the time since he has been connected, in one way or another, with the "types." He is indeed a veteran; and one who has the respect of every newspaper man in the state. The help his pen has been to Fond du Lac will never be known. While Bro. Beeson and ourselves have grabbed each other by the throat, politically, in the heat of a campaign, there has never been other than the friendliest feelings between us, personally, and we join scores of newspaper men in regretting his departure from the profession he has so long honored; and in hoping that he may yet repent and return to his first love.

The little reference to Mr. Beeson [illegible] his ticket.

THE BEAVER ARGUS

Is published every Wednesday in the old Argus building on Third Street, Beaver, Pa., at $2 per year in advance.

Communications on subjects of local or general interest are respectfully solicited. To insure attention favors of this kind must invariably be accompanied by the name of the author.

Letters and communications should be addressed to J. WEYAND, Beaver, Pa.

Alice Cary's Only Love.

In the profoundest sense, Alice Cary loved but once. The man whom she loved is still alive; yet gossip, with its keenest scent, has never fonud or named him. With all her fulness of affection, hers was an eclectic and solitary soul. He, by the very patent of his being more to her than any other mortal could be, might pass from her life, but no other could ever take his place. A proud and prosperous family brought all their pride and power to bear on a son to prevent his marrying a girl uneducated, rustic, and poor. "I waited for one who never came back," she said. "Yet I believed he would come till I read in a paper his marriage to another. Can you think what life would be, loving one, waiting for the one who would never come!"

He did come at last, I saw him. His wife had died. Alice was dying. The gray-haired man sat down beside the gray-haired woman. Life had dealt prosperous with him, as it is wont with men. Suffering and death had taken all from her save the luster of her wondrous eyes. From her wan and wasted face they shone upon him full of tenderness and youth. Thus they met with life behind them—they who parted plighted lovers when life was young. He was the man whom she forgave for her blighted and weary life, with a smile of parting as divine as ever lit the face of woman.—Independent.

Bronchial Consumption.

This is a form of consumption usually of easy remedy by means of Dr. Keyser's Lung Cure, which, whilst it eliminates the mucous and phlegm from the throat, heals the membrane and allays that morbid irritability which produces such harrassing coughing, and when the disease involves the larynx, hoarsness and pain in the throat. Reader, if you value your health and life, do not allow such a condition to go on until it has attacked the lungs, when it will not be easily cured. Begin in time. Then a few bottles of Dr. Keyser's Lung Cure will eradicate the disease—if neglected it will take more than a dozen.

There is hardly a form of lung disease which Dr. Keyser's Lung Cure will not cure, if used in time. It not only heals the lungs, but it puts the constitution in a healthy condition, and enables it to resist disease. Sold at the Doctor's great medicine store, 167 Liberty street. $1.50 per bottle, or 4 bottles taken at a time, $5.

Dr. Keyser's Medical Office in the rear of his store, 167 Liberty street, Pittsburgh, from 10, a. m. until 1, p. m. and from 3, p. m. until 6.

Wedding Tours.

The Washington Star has the following to say of wedding tours: "One of our exchanges, in an article on 'the honeymoon,' tries to pursuade young married people that it is better for them to stay quietly at home at such an interesting period of their existance and not go wandering off on exhibition. Most people will agree with the writer; but ten to one if he is a single man and ever gets married he will do just as the others do. Why a wedding tour should be considered the correct thing is one of those conundrums which, as Dundreary says, 'no fellow can find out.' If our brides could be persuaded to forego the blessed privilege of leading their prizes around with a ribbon, we would recommend, for a change, the singular custom which prevails at Nassau, New Providence. Near that place there is a solitary house, pleasantly situated, where all the newly married couples go to pass the honeymoon. They take a servant or two and steal away from the town to this place, from which, after 'a becoming period' is passed, they come forth again."

The Beaver Argus.

J. WEYAND, Editor and Proprietor.

Beaver, Pa., March 13th, 1872.

THE Pittsburgh Mail, a furious Grant newspaper, had a dispatch from Washington last Friday as follows:

It is asserted on the best authority that President Grant has expressed himself in opposition to the renomination of Mr. Colfax for the Vice Presidency. It is further asserted that he expresses a desire that the name of Jas. F. Wilson of Iowa, be placed on the ticket for the position now held by Mr. Colfax.

We suggest an amendment to the effect that Mr. Colfax be put on the ticket in place of General Grant, and Henry Wilson of Massachusetts instead of James F. Wilson of Iowa.

THE editor of the New York Tribune, is a member of the National Republican Committee, but declined to allow his name to be appended to the call for a National Convention at Philadelphia on the 5th of June. There has been so much newspaper controversy touching this refusal on his part, that his note written at the time to the Secretary of the committee, has been asked for publication. The following is a copy of it:

FRIEND CHANDLER: Please not to attach my name to the call for the National Convention. I stayed away from your meeting on purpose to keep a position of independence. If we have trustworthy assurance of reform from the White House, all right, but I am not inclined to help our Leets and Stockings to another half million of plunder. Yours, HORACE GREELEY.
New York, Jan. 15, 1872.
Hon. Wm. E. Chandler, Washington City, D. C.

THE Government of the United States has made three treaties with Japan since negotiations have been entered into between them. It also concluded a treaty in 1854 with Lew Chew—a groupe of small Islands tributary to both China and Japan. Under the treaty with Japan, of 1858, the President of the United States is required to act as a friendly mediator, at the request of the Japanese government in the event of any complication arising between that nation and any foreign power. It is believed in Washington that our Government will be asked by the Embassy now in that city to offer its mediatory service between Japan and Russia in the matter of disputed sovereignty over the island of Saghellion, lying along the coast of Siberia, and commanding the mouth of the Amoor river. Japan claims to have held it for many generations, and Russia disputes this. The former has settlements, and has long sent political and other prisoners there. Russia has established military stations on the island and collisions are imminent between the two powers.

THE New Hampshire state election took place yesterday—Tuesday—with the probabilities in favor of a Republican triumph of about one thousand majority. In the early part of the campaign the political tide seemed to set in strongly in favor of the Democrats. The San Domingo matter; the treatment of Sumner, in removing him from the chairmanship of committee on Foreign Affairs; the opposition to an investigation of the New York Custom House frauds and the general disposition of those in the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States who have undertaken to pilot the administration and smother all investigation of alleged abuses, and "read out" from opprobrium,—gave the opposition great odds at the outset of the political campaign in that State. But there has been a great reaction within the last two weeks caused by the leaders of the Democracy—both in Congress and the State of New Hampshire—boldly advocating the doctrine of free trade. The farmers and mechanics of that State are in favor of a protective tariff, and they will stand by the Republican party because it is more favorable to that policy. It may be that we shall have sufficient returns, before going to press, to indicate the result in New Hampshire; if so, we shall append them. At this writing we have nothing.

THE trial of Mayor Hall, of New York, progressed very slowly from its commencement up to the middle of last week; and himself and counsel were jubilant over a prospective triumphant acquittal of his honor from the charge of malfeasance in signing fraudulent claims against the city. The decision of the court in the case of the State of New York against Stokes, for the murder of Fisk, sustaining the legality of the Grand Jury which found the bill of indictment not only against Stokes, but against Hall, Tweed, Connelly &c., cut off all hope of quashing the indictment against the Mayor, or any of the Tammany ring. The trials must proceed; but, up to the time mentioned, no very damaging evidence had been adduced against Hall; and, therefore, everything appeared lovely. But, suddenly, the prosecuting attorney called Andrew J. Garvey who, to the surprise of all, except those in the secret, entered the court room by a door back of the Judge's bench and took the witness stand. The Counsel for the defendant were taken completely by surprise, and the countenance of the Mayor exhibited rage and fear.

Mr. Garvey, it will be remembered, was thought to have absconded with his ill-gotten wealth; but through the diplomacy of his wife, an arrangement was affected with the prosecuting attorney, whereby, in consideration of his giving up a portion of his fradulently obtained wealth and turning State's evidence against the balance of the ring, and making a clean breast of it, he was not to be prosecuted. Under this arrangement he returned to the City during the winter and remained incog. until brought into court last week.—He states on oath that only about 33 per cent. of the bills he rendered against the city were genuine, the balance were fraudulent, and were divided among Tweed Connelly, and others of the ring, to the amount of hundreds of thousands of dollars—and were audited and passed by Hall, Connelly and the board of audit.—This looks black for the Mayor; and the other conspirators in the frauds, have taken the alarm and either have, or it is feared will forfeit their bail and abscond. Connelly is said to have already departed.

It is thought Ingersoll will, also, turn State's evidence, if so the whole ring will be exposed and some portions of the stolen millions be returned to the [illegible]y—a consummation devo[illegible]ished.

HERE AND THERE.

—Prince Henry, son of the Crown Prince of the German Empire, has been apprenticed to a book-binder in Berlin. The Leipsic Tageblatt of the 2nd inst. states that the Crown Prince is a compositor, and gives a song which was sung by the men of the office to which he belonged on the occasion of his marriage to the Princess Victoria of England.

—A young lady in Boston recently attempted to commit suicide in a manner by no means romantic. Instead of resorting to opium, charcoal gas, Paris green, or any other well-established end-all, swallowed a prodigious dose of "Parson's Rat Exterminator." Whatever romance there might be in such an ignoble proceeding, was quite taken out of it by the medical man, who administered an emetic, and so dislodged the Rat Exterminator.

—Barnum has been advertising in the New York papers for 300, teetotalers to act as drivers, canvass-men etc., for his traveling show, next summer. He received nearly twenty-five hundred calls or replys, the first day, all announcing their immaculate temperance. It is gratifying to think that so many men are readily to be found who avoid throwing their money away upon whiskey, ut it is sad to find that so large a number spring up at the demand for work.

—Five times before had the publication of The Dundee Weekly, in Illinois, been suspended for want of funds; and a few days since it died for the sixth time, its last issue containing the editors opinion of Dundee. This, it may be readily conjectured, is not complimentary, for he declares that "he intends to leave for any place in the known world on any train which will take him out of sight of the dead things that walk the streets of Dundee." He warns all printers to keep out of this most unfruitful field, if they would escape slow starvation. It may be surmised that very little was seen of this plain-speaking printer in Dundee after this candid publication of his sentiments.

—There is something touching in the ingenuity displayed in dunning their delinquent debtors which tradesmen grown desperate sometimes display. Thus a hardware merchant in Knoxville, Tenn., declares in an advertisement that "a hardware business can no more be carried on everlastingly without money, than a dog can wag his tail when he has none." "My customers," adds the sufferer, "are all good, but what good does a man's goodness do when he don't do any good?" A question which numbers of people may well ponder seriously. Our Knoxville dealer's patience has given out at last, and he talks ferociously of writs and constables.

—Photography, after a long career of unexampled success, has at last met with a blow. John T. Corbett of Pittsburgh, Penn, saw by accident the miniature of Mary Gilmore, an Irish lassie then in the old country. That picture hit John in a soft place; through the artistic proxy he fell in love with the dear original; sent over for her, although he had sworn by letter to marry her, utterly refused to do so upon the ground that she did not look at all like her own photograph! This is encouraging. There has long been a suspicion that for some mysterious reason, a great many photographs do not at all resemble those who unquestionably did sit for them, and that, as portraits, they were not of much value. Mary has sued John for breach of promise; and so there is a nice mess generally.

—Speaking of romance, there is a story of love and constancy which has just made material for a few days' gossip at the capital. Ten years ago the daughter of one of our naval officers stationed at San Francisco became engaged to a handsome young Russian, who visited that port with the Russian fleet. The lovers were soon separated; the lieutenant sailed away; the lady in, course of time came with her father to Washington. A correspondence was maintained regularly, but there was no opportunity for meeting. Finally, the officer was ordered to a distant post, where mails were unknown. No word was heard of him for three years. In spite of the remonstrances of her freinds, the lady trusted and waited, and a few weeks ago a letter came to say that he was on his way to America to claim the fulfillment of her promise. He brought with him a sister, of whom report speaks as the most beautiful woman ever seen in Washington, and the other day the constancy of ten years was rewarded by a quiet wedding at Georgetown. So runs the story; perhaps it is exaggerated, as such stories usually are; but is pleasant enough to deserve telling.

The invitation to Senator Schurz to meet and act with the Committee of Investigation of the sale-of-arms question is a virtual reconsideration of the Senate's action denying him a place on said committee, a confession that it was a blunder not to have included him in the original list. Such Senators as Henry Wilson of Massachusetts, whose Republican orthodoxy will not be disputed, saw that it would be a blunder, and he, with other Senators scarcely less conspicuous as supporters of the administration, exerted themselves to defeat Mr. Cameron's tactics. Though they were barely beaten, the mistake of the majority was almost instantly seen and repaired, so far as it could be, by virtually adding Senator Schurz to the committee. And here it may be remarked, that whatever party or faction undertakes to resist the spirit of inquiry, which to an extraordinary degree is rife everywhere, errs in judgment.—It is something that will not be resisted. Doubtless frivilous charges have been and will continue to be made, and groundless accusations brought forward which should receive no attention; but when charges of a serious character are formally made, as in the case of an alleged sale of arms, the wiser course is to institute an inquiry and make it thorough.—Least of all will be tolerated any attempt to brand with treason or unfaithfulness to the party those who favor investigation. In our judgment they are most faithful to the party who favor inquiry—they at least manifest their confidence in Republican principles and the ability of the party to stand the test of scrutiny.—And standing the test of scrutiny is the best possible claim to the confidence of the nation. If it cannot stand such a test, it cannot command nor is it worthy of such confidence.—Pittsburgh Commercial.

Forty-Second Congress.

SECOND SESSION.

SENATE, March 4.—The Legislative appropriation bill was taken up, and after some time spent in its consideration, the Senate went into executive session, and continued therein until the hour of adjournment.

HOUSE.—Mr. Hibbard introduced a bill to test a plan of storm and flood signals. Mr. Negley, from the committee on Commerce, reported a bill to amend the steamboat law, which was ordered printed and recommitted. The House then, in committee of the whole, considered the deficiency appropriation bill. Without concluding its consideration, the committee rose and the House adjourned.

SENATE, March 5.—The bill to extend the act of 1870, relating to transportation of merchandize in bond, to Pittsburgh, passed. The committee to investigate the sales of arms to the French war elected. Of course, none who advocated the passage of the resolution, were elected, it might have been damaging to the prospects of those implicated; as it now stands, the investigation will prove a "smothering of facts," unless John A. Logan should feel called on to claim a fair show. The Legislative appropriation bill was considered at some length. The committee on public buildings reported in favor of extending the Capitol grounds, which was agreed to. An appropriation of $50,000 was ordered to enable the President to put in force the Civil Service Reform Rules.

HOUSE.—A bill to allow additional representation to the States of New Hampshire, Vermont, New York, Pennsylvania, Louisiana, Alabama and Florida—such additional representatives to be elected by those States at large unless otherwise provided for by legislation—was introduced. A lengthy discussion ensued on a bill asking for more of the public lands. The deficiency bill was then considered, until near the close of the day without any definite action. The committee of arrangements for the reception of the Japanese Embassy on the floor of the House, reported and then an adjournment took place.

SENATE, March 6.—After the transaction of some business of no general interest, the Senate resumed consideration of the legislative appropriation bill. It was finally reported to the Senate. After an executive session the Senate adjourned.

HOUSE.—An immense assemblage was present in the House of Representatives to witness the reception of the Japanese embassy. The Speaker called the House to order at eleven o'clock, when, on motion of Mr. Cox, the ladies who were unable to find places in the gallery were admitted to the floor. The visitors were announced at the main door, when they came into the hall escorted by General Banks and other members of the Committee on Foreign Affairs, accompanied by Mr. Mori, Minister De Long, and Consul Brooks. The Embassadors occupied the center of the group. Other Japanese were arraigned in the outer line immediately in their rear. General Banks formally presented the embassy to the House. The Speaker addressed the visitors as follows: "Your Excellencies: On behalf of the House of Representatives, I welcome your Imperial Embassy to this Hall. The reception which is thus extended to you so unanimously and so cordially by the members of this body, is significant of the interests which our whole people feel in the rapidly developing relations between Japan and the American republic. The course of migration for the human race has, for many centuries, been steadily westward. The course has always been marked by conquest, too often by rapine. Reaching the boundary of our continent, we encounter the returning tide from your country setting eastward, seeking not the trophies of war, but the shores bi-ing [illegible] Pacific sea. It will be my pleasure to present to you personally the representatives of our people, I beg to assure you for them and myself that during your stay at our capital you will be at all times welcome to the privileges and courtesies of the floor."

Iwakura proceeded to read, as if chanting, a response in his own language. After the reception ceremonies the House proceeded with the regular business. After a long discussion on the bill granting half of Goat Island, in the harbor of San Francisco, to the Union Pacific Railroad Company, it went over and the deficiency appropriation bill was taken up. The bill was finally reported to the House, but without voting on it, adjourned.

SENATE, March 7.—Bills passed for the erection of public buildings at St. Louis, and Little Rock. A resolution passed requiring the committee on commerce to inquire into the subjects of immigration and the treatment of immigrants on their arrival into this country, and on their passage by railroads to the interior, was adopted. The appropriation bill coming up, the amendments made in committee were concurred in, and after a lengthy debate on the item of $50,000 to carry out the Presidents civil service Reform—which Senator Logan said "was a humbug; two or three days previous their was an examination in one of the departments, when twenty-three competed for the office, and one of the clerks in the department told him before the examination the name of the man who would get the appointment. He (Logan) did not know how it was done, but he used the fact as an illustration of the folly of the selection of officers by competitive examination"—the Senate adjourned.

HOUSE.—Nothing was done of any general public interest.

SENATE, March 8.—The Secretary of the Interior was directed to communicate any information in his possession concerning the occupation of the Indian territory by improper persons. A bill was introduced for the payment of female nurses in the army. A bill was introduced to refund to state officers taxes paid on their salaries. Mr. Trumbull gave notice that he should offer an amendment to Mr. Conkling's resolution relative to recommendations to office by senators—their number, and by whom made. The statues of Jonathan Trumbull and Roger Sherman were formally presented to the United States in the name of the people of Connecticut. They were accepted, and thanks returned. The Legislative appropriation bill then came up, the question being on $50,000 for civil service Reform; but without action the Senate adjourned.

House.—An amended bill making Pittsburgh a port of delivery, was concurred in. A bill for the payment of $100.00 bounty to Soldiers and Sailors—their widows or orphans—who were mustered into the service prior to the 6th of August, 1861, was passed. The post-office appropriation bill—$28,250,000,—was considered in committee of the whole, about half the sections were disposed of when the committee rose and the House adjourned until Monday.

ST. LOUIS, March 8.—Charles H. Bunklin, living at 312 South Fifth street, shot his wife about seven o'clock this evening, and then shot himself. Mrs. Bunklin has two wounds, one just below the nipple, the other in the abdomen, and is lying in a critical condition. Bunklin's wound is in the center of the forehead. Although he is not dead yet, he cannot recover. Bunklin is represented as a worthless, dissipated man, very abusive to his wife, while she is said to have been a very estimable woman, and has supported her husband for the past two years. The immediate cause of the shooting seems to have been Mrs. B.'s announcement the evening that she designed applying for a divorce.

THE "TWO WITNESSES."

BY HOMO.

MR. EDITOR:—In our attempt to relieve the mind of that gentleman friend, near Hazel Dell, we shall endeavor to show to the readers of the ARGUS that although this portion of Divine revelation is considered, by the professed church, to rank among the nonessentials; that it is, nevertheless, a "Revelation of Jesus Christ, which God gave unto him to show unto his servants things which must shortly come to pass."

In our last we determined the two testaments to be the "two witnesses;" we shall notice now what is meant by "prophesying in sackcloth." Sackcloth has two significations in the scriptures. 1st, sorrow, affliction, mourning; 2d, obscurity or darkness. It has the latter meaning in this instance, under the "sixth seal," it is said, "the sun became black as sackcloth of hair," Rev. vi, 12. "Sackcloth of hair" over the sun would not shut out its light wholly, but would produce a partial obscuration. So with these two testaments, they were to prophesy during the whole gospel dispensation, but their sackcloth testimony is confined to 1,260 years, during which period their testimony was to be faithfully borne, but in a measure hid or obscured by a shroud of sackcloth thrown over them. Paul informs us that in his day "the word of God was not bound;" but he also speaks of the "falling away" or apostacy that was to ensue after his disease. He tells us that the great pagan power, which then persecuted the church, "hindered" the development of that apostacy, but that this hindering cause should be "taken out of the way," and then this apostacy, should begin and make rapid strides towards perfection in the establishment of "the man of sin," or papal hierarchal succession. The church continued comparatively pure until Constantine, the Roman Emperor was converted—about A. D. 312, when the church rapidly became corrupt—creed after creed was instituted, and "the way seemed prepared for the decay of every Christian doctrine." By the commencement of the sixth century the apostacy was complete, and the historians inform us that the "worship of the christians had become no less idolatrous than that of the Pagans—the Roman Catholic Church was fully developed. The first name found on the head of the symbolic woman of Rev. xvii, which represents the Catholic Church, is that of "mystery." This will give us a clue to the meaning of the "sackcloth" which was to enshroud the "witnesses" during 1260 years. The Revelator informs us that this woman is "that great city that reigneth over the Kings of the earth," and this reign is confined to 1260 years, during which time the holy city should be trodden "under foot." We see that the establishment of the Catholic Church, by the "kings of the earth," as the only tolerated church, is the event that marks the beginning of the 1260 years of "war on the saints." Now it will be seen that when this is done, the Catholic creed takes the place of the word of God in its purity, or rather the testimony of the witnesses must be interpreted according to the Romish creed of "mystery." The bible being confined wholly to the hands of the Romish clergy, all the light that eminated from it, must find its way through the creeds, confessions, and established dogmas of the "mother of harlots," which, like a pall of "sackcloth" enveloped them; consequently the "holy city" or true church must accept the testimony of the "witnesses," as interpreted by the Roman ritual, or suffer martyrdom for remaining faithful to their true teachings. Consequently the Revelator says: "They were slain for the word of God and for the testimony which they held," Rev. vi, v., which was the unclouded testimony of the "witnesses."

The Catholic creed was to tread "under foot" the former, and clothe the latter "in sackcloth," namely, the establishment of the Catholic faith by legal enactment, we shall now give this fearful edict with its date. The Catholic Church having become united on all points of doctrine, and the Pope of Rome acknowledges as its head, nothing remained to be done but the issuance of the edict by the civil power, compelling "all men" to embrace and profess its faith, accordingly, in A. D., 532, Justinian, the mighty monarch of Eastern Rome, finished the work and began the awful "war on the saints" by issuing the infamous decree which we now give from "Bower's History of the Popes," vol. 1, page 334, who says:

"While, the Arian King was striving, by the most just and equitable laws, to clear the church from all simony in the West, the Catholic Emperor was employing the most unjust and un-christian means of clearing her from all heresies in the East—that of persecution, and the most cruel persecution any Christian emperor had yet set on foot, or countenanced. For by an edict which he issued, to unite all men in one faith, whether Jews, Gentiles, or Christians, such as did not, in the term of three months, embrace and profess the Catholic faith, were doclared infamous and as such excluded from all employments, both civil and military, rendered incapable of leaving anything by will, and their estates confiscated, whether real or personal. These were convincing arguments of the truth of the Catholic faith; but may, however, withstood them, and against such as did, the imperial edict was executed with the utmost rigor. Great numbers were driven from their homes, with their wives and children, stripped and naked. Others betook themselves to flight, carrying with them what they could conceal, for their support and maintenance; but they were plundered of the little they had, and many of them inhumanly massacred by the Catholic peasants, or the soldiery, who guarded the passes."

Here we have just what the prophesy demands, namely, the establishment of the Catholic religion and all men compelled to embrace it, and it is executed with all the military force of this mighty empire. The "down trodden" saints of God now begin to fall "by flame, spoil, sword, and captivity" "for the word of God and for the testimony which they held." The rack, fagot, and dungeon are brought into requisition to compell the saints of God to renounce the true faith. The father who has gathered around him a family of loved ones, "stripped and naked," or "inhumanly massacreed." Here, then, began the treading under foot of the "holy city." Gibbon also informs us that: "The insufficient term of three months was assigned for the conversion or exile of all heretics. * * * * On the approach of the Catholic priests and soldiers, they grasped with alacrity the crown of martyrdom, the conventical and the congregation perished in the flames. But in the creed of Justinian the guilt of murder could not be applied to the slaughter of unbelievers, he piously labored to establish with FIRE and SWORD the unity of the Christian faith," Gib. vol. 3, page 264 and 265. This infamous act not only trod "under foot" the "holy city," but it also clothed the "witnesses" in "sackcloth," by enshrouding them with the Catholic creed, and thus obscuring their true meaning.

Having now shown all the characteristics of the "witnesses," and the beginning of their "sackcloth" testimony in 532, together with the beginning of the treading "under foot" of the "holy city" or church, we are prepared to follow this period to its termination and see what events are demanded by the prophecy to mark its end.

The "Justinian Code" of persecution was perpetuated by the civil powers over which the Roman church reigned for 1260 years, during which period from 50,000,000 to 75,000,000 of the saints were offered as a sacrifice upon the altar of the faith of the "mystical Jezebel."

In our next we shall consider the 7 verse of Rev. xi., "And when they shall have finished their testimony, the beast that ascendeth out of the bottomless pit shall make war against them, and shall overcome them, and kill them.

Why don't the preachers in our churches take up these questions, and enlighten the people? Why leave these questions of such vital importance to be answered by the lay members? Echo answers, why?

The Hartranft Investigation Smothered—Dumb Defendants—More Curious Correspondence.

HARRISBURG, March 6.—The Senate Committee to which The Tribune correspondence was referred, held a session this evening. The witnesses examined were those charged, in the Legislature and by the Cameron press, with attempting to compel virtuous State officers to do certain things they ought not to do, by attacking them in The Tribune. The testimony contradicted these assertions, positively. The witnesses had no knowledge of The Tribune's correspondent, nor of his works—except as copied by the local press, And so ends the only action the Legislature is likely to take respecting the grave charges brought against the Treasurer and Auditor General of the State.

The important committees now in session can hardly report until after the middle of the month. There will then be at least a month's work yet to be done beside redistricting the State under the apportionment bill. It is, therefore, probable the session will be extended through the whole of April, if not well into May.

Not one word of reply is made by Messrs. Hartranft, Mackey & Co. to the damaging inquiries so clearly and specifically stated. The Legislature, so prompt to smother the investigation resolution, cannot be goaded into reviving it. The Evening Bulletin and like journals, so free of abuse at first, because The Tribune dared to publish the fact that an Investigating Committee had been asked for and denied, have not a syllable to utter since it has been shown that an investigation is sorely needed. If Mr. Hartranft and his friends have really nothing to say, your correspondent will turn attention to Mr. Mackey, who has been promised the next opportunity to appear and answer. But perhaps Mr. H. is only taking time to consider, and if so, it might be well to give him another item or two to ponder upon. In that view, your correspondent begs leave to offer the following letter:

AUDITOR GENERAL'S OFFICE,
HARRISBURG, Dec. 21, 1869.

Dear ——: Calhoun telegraphed me to-day for money, and had to give a check for $8,700, which he will present to morrow (22) I cannot avoid this. I met Mackey here on Monday; he went west in the afternoon, and will not return until Monday. I did not like to ask him again, but I did not think Calhoun would want any money so soon. I will see you on Saturday, and whatever you want done, I will do. I will meet M. here next Monday, and whatever is necessary I will ask him to do.
Yours, most truly,
J. F. HARTRANFT.

P. S.—Will lift Calhoun's check on Saturday, and give you certificates of deposits to that amount. J. F. H.

This is not a formidable looking letter, and Mr. H. need not fear to acknowledge it—providing he can fairly answer the one or two questions it suggests: Was the check mentioned drawn to the order of Alfred R. Calhoun, and was he at the time the Pension agent for the United States in Philadelphia? Was Hartranft agree to give "Calhoun" certain considerations for the use of the money? What were the relations between the Auditor's office and the State treasury that permitted such close dependence as this letter indicates? Did Mackey share in the Calhoun loan that he, the State Treasurer, was relied upon to do whatever might be necessary in setling this, a private transaction?

STEAMBOATS BURNED.

Six Boats Burned at Cincinnati—The Abeona, Kate Robinson, St. Charles, Argosy, Major Anderson and Champion Destroyed—The loss over $200,000.

CINCINNATI, March 6th.—Five steamers were burned at the landing to-night, Abeona, the Kate Robinson, St. Charles, Argosy, Major Anderson and Champion, and hull of the Belle Vernon, sunk recently by the ice. The fire originated aft on the St. Charles, which was the third boat from the wharfboat, just above the suspension bridge. How the fire originated is not known. The Captain and some others on the St. Charles jumped overboard and swam ashore. It is feared some on board failed to escape. The fire spread up and down stream rapidly. The wharf boat, next to which the Abeona was lying, was about half consumed. The Kate Robinson was loaded for the Tennessee river. She was a stern wheel boat, valued with freight at probably $20,000. The St. Charles was a side-wheel boat in the Pittsburgh trade. The Argosy belonged to Captain Shank, was loading for New Orleans, and had two hundred barrels of whisky on board. No insurance on the boat. With freight her loss is about $12,000. The Major Anderson was a fine side-wheel packet, in the Wheeling trade. She was loaded with freight. Loss, with cargo, $75,000. The Champion was the highest boat up the river and the last to take fire. She was a stern-wheeler, and was loading with furniture and other freight for Red River. Her owners were Captains Isham and Williamson. Her value was $6,000, freight valued at $10,000. The total loss cannot be definitely ascertained or reliably estimated. Many of the boats are small, most of them old. An approximate estimate would be $200,000 to $225,000. The officers at the landing said one of the boats contained a keg of powder, and a loud report, as of an explosion, has just been heard in the direction of the landing. The Kate Skillinger, lying just above the Champion, was towed away and saved by the Newport Ferry. All the fire department was called out. Twenty-five bales cotton and numerous crates of queensware on the landing, with other freight, were consumed. The loss is total, except, perhaps, in the case of the steamer Champion, the hull of which may be saved.

LATER.—The Kate Robinson and Abeona were owned by Capts. Williamson and Isham; the St. Charles by Capt. C. A. Dravo, Joseph Smith and other Pittsburgh men; the Argosy by Capt. Schenck and Brothers, of Vevay, Indiana; the Major Anderson was owned by Capt. Muhleman & Co. of Wheeling; the Abeona was full of freight from Tennessee river, whence she had but recently arrived. Her freight is put at $75,000. The Kate Robinson had on board 75 tons of gcocerries, &c., valued at $16,000, and the boat at $8,000. The St. Charles was valued at $15,000. The furniture and freight of the Champion was valued at $20,000, the boat at $10,000; not insured. These figures are obtained from a more reliable source than those already telegraphed. The Major Anderson is valued at $15,000. The report sent of the freight on the Major Anderson was probably entirely over-estimated. She was lying up on account of low water. Ann Watson, chambermaid of the Kate Robinson, fell into the river and was drowned.

The Wheat Supply of the North-west.

George D. Russel & Co., prominent produce dealers in Milwaukee, have gathered statistics concerning the supply of wheat on hand in the great wheat growing States of Wisconsin, Iowa and Minnesota.

As the subject is one of importance we present this abstract taken from the New York Evening Mail:

"Although no full or exact figures could be obtained, it can easily be gathered from the reports that the stock on hand among local dealers is considerably smaller than at the same time last year, while the quality is generally better. Comparatively little is likely to be sent to eastern markets from those States before the new crops begin to come in. The farmers seem to be holding back, however, in the hope of obtaining better prices in the Spring on account of the short supply, and will be likely to let what they have go into the market after the sowing is over. The indication from the demand for seed-wheat appears to be that a large amount will be sown, and preparations made for a large harvest next fall. Very little if any of the crops of 1870 now remains on hand, and fully two thirds of that of 1871 is exhausted. In Minnesota, the crop of last year was materially lessened, by violent storms.

The condition of the central markets at Milwaukee and Chicago gives the same indication as that of the local markets. At Milwaukee there is a stock of 1,797,655 bushels against 2,467,132 bushels at the same time last year, while at Chicago there are 1,605,328 bushels, against 3,464 225 on the first of March, 1871. Of course the market at the latter city has suffered very much from the great fire of October. The general inference to be drawn from the statements contained in this circular is that the stock in the hands of dealers is from two-thirds to three-fourths of what it was a year ago, while the quality is generally better; but at the same time a larger amount is held back by farmers with the hope of an advance in the price, so that the total supply is not so far short as might be supposed at the first glance. A slight stringency is nevertheless likely to be created in the market, and the prices must run somewhat higher. Should the comnig season prove favorable, a very heavy harvest may be anticipated this year.

Election of Postmasters.

It is anonnced from Washington that there are many indications that the proposition to amend the Constitution, so as to permit the election of Postmasters by the people, is rapidly gaining in favor. On Saturday there were two speeches made in its support in the House, one by Mr. Hay, of Illinois, and the other by Mr. McCrary, of Iowa. A bill for the proposed amendment was introduced two years ago by Mr. Coburn, of Indiana, and was recently revived by Mr. McCrary, and coupled with a provision to secure permanence of tenure for four years to all civil officers, unless removed for incompetency or dishonesty. McCrary said that the evils of the Civil Service did not grow out of the appointing of unfit persons, and that the remedy was not to be found in a Civil Service Commission and a system of competitive examinations, the great evils, he thought, grew out of the power of removal from office without cause. The best remedy for this evil, Mr. McCrary said, was the contemplated reform of enabling the people to elect their servants to serve them as federal officers. Mr. Hay made a strong argument in favor of the amendment. He also spoke in favor of a bill recently introduced by himself providing for an equal distribution of appointments in the department at Washington among the several Congress [illegible] scarcely be said to be in the direction of Civil Service Reform, the first principle of which requires the abandonment of the idea that appointments are patronage, in which States, Congress Districts or Congressmen are entitled to share.

A Jackson, Florida, dispatch of the 29th ult. says: "Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe has met with a very serious accident at her residence at Mandarin. It seems that she and Dr. Stowe were in their bed chamber, when she, in attempting to arrange the drapery of her window, stood upon a high table. Having completed her arrangement she stepped backward, and catching her hoop-skirt fell with violence to the floor, striking the base of her brain against the sharp edge of a bedstead, while her back fell squarely upon a sitz bath tub which was standing near the table. Mrs. Henry Ward Beecher, Dr. Stowe and a daughter of the unfortunate lady ran hastily to her aid. She was picked up insensible and laid upon her bed. Every thing was done which could be suggested, and the following morning Mrs. Stowe was without much pain in the head, but suffered much in the back."

A telegram from Springfield, Mass, dated March 8, says a passenger train which left here this morning for New York, was thrown from the track two miles below the Springfield depot. The train was running at the rate of fifteen miles an hour. when it encountered a broken rail. The engine and Adams Express car passed over the break, but the four cars next following, the baggage, mail smoking and one ordinary passenger car went down the embankment. The sleeping cars did not run off the embankment and no one was injured in these cars, and not more than ten or twelve persons were injured by the accident, and it is believed none fatally. Among those injured is Admiral De Rohan, of France. It is wonderful that none were killed. The mail car caught fire and was distroyed, together with a large amount of mail matter.

Spring Elections.—By act of the Legislature last winter, the spring elections in this State have been restored.—These will be held on next Friday (March 15th.) We trust the people will take some interest in these, and see that good competent men, are selected to fill every office to be filled on that day. Since the act has passed giving Justices of the Peace additional powers, it is highly important that none but intelligent, honest and prudent men be chosen for these positions. Recollect, that under the new law these officers empannel Juries, have authority to hear important cases, and even sentence convicted parties to the county jail. It is of the utmost importance, then, we repeat, that none but the best of men are selected as Justices of the Peace.

Dolly Varden, the fortunate young lady after whom the fashionable dress for next summer is named, was the charming daughter of a London locksmith, Gabriel Varden by name, and lived in the reign of George the Third. She afterward became Mrs. Joe Willet. The New York Mail, which answers a correspondent on the subject, says: "For further information we would refer our inquirer to a certain book of reference called 'Barnaby Rudge,' written by one Charles Dickens, an author of some local reputation. Whether the lady in question was given to wearing materials of a startling loud character in color and pattern this deponent has no knowledge nor information sufficient to form a belief. About a year ago, however, some inspired modiste rechristened what was then known as 'cretonnes,' and called them 'Dolly Vardens.' The name was first confined to chintzes, but it spread to other materials. At a late dry goods exposition 'Dolly Varden' silks were exhibited, and now whole costumes, whose like was never seen on sea or shore, are named after the charming and coquettish little daughter of a London locksmith."

Children's Eating.—Whenever a parent sees a child come to the breakfast table, nibble a little, then go away, death is in the distance, and may be near in a great many cases; in all there is solid ground for apprehension of coming ill in some form or other. This want of appetite for breakfast may come on very slowly; it may be weeks before it is decided enough to be remarked; so much the worse for the child, because greater will be the difficulty of righting things.

If children are going to school, eating should be made compulsory, or brain disease will follow, sooner or later, for the brain must be nourished, or restless sleep follows, and in its train dreams, nervousness, cold feet and hands, with severe debility.

All school children should have plenty of meat and bread for breakfast and dinner, with all the fruits and berries they can get afterwards for desert, if not these, then no desert at all. A speedy and easy way to remedy meal time nibbling is to begin with a supper of bread and butter, and one cup of hot milk and water, and nothing else, allow not an atom of anything else to be eaten between meals, and compel them to be in bed by nine o'clock. Within a week a hearty breakfast will be the result, with an increasing vivacity, activity, life and joyousness.

Facts for the Single.—A French philosopher has lately brought to light some curious social statistics compiled from the records of eleven years in France, Belgium and Holland, says the Hartford Courant, relative to the longevity of married and single men, which furnish fresh proof of the danger of living. It appears that married men between the ages of twenty-five and thirty years are far more apt to live than unmarried men, the ratio of deaths being, in their favor, as four to ten and a half in every thousand persons. Here is a powerful argument for early marriages if the law of self-preservation becomes their advocates, but a little further development of the records shows that at the same age widowers die at the rate of twenty-two in every thousand, being twice as perishable as their unmarried brethren. When the age advances to between thirty and thirty five years the case is reversed. Married men die at the rate of eleven and single men only five in every thousand, the latter nearly recovering the ground lost in the previous semi-decade. Unfortunate widowers, however, are still at a disadvantage, dying at the rate of nineteen in every thousand. These figures open a wide field for drawing inferences and moral lessons. Evidently dangers hedge about the life of man, but the chief and most apparent warning conveyed by the facts of the case is the necessity of a man's carefully preserving the life of a wife, if he has one, since her loss increases by about fourfold the imminence of an end to his own career.

What is in the Bedroom?—If two persons are to occupy a bed-room during the night, let them step on a weighing scale as they retire, and then again in the morning and they will find their actual weight is at least a pound less in the morning. Frequently there will be a loss of two or more pounds, and the average loss throughout the year, will be a pound of matter, which has gone off from their bodies, partly from the lungs and partly through the pores of the skin. The escaped matter is carbonic acid and decayed animal matter or poisonous inhalation. This is diffused through the air in part, and part absorbed by the bed clothes. If a single ounce of wood or cotton be burned in a room, it will so completely saturate the air with smoke that one can hardly breathe, though there can be only one ounce of foreign matter in the air.

If an ounce of cotton be burned every half hour during the night, the air will be kept continually saturated with smoke, unless there be an open window or door for it to escape. Now the sixteen ounces of smoke thus formed are far less poisonous than the sixteen of exhalations from the lungs and bodies of two persons who have lost a pound in weight during the eight hours of sleeping; for while the smoke is mainly taken into the lungs, the damp odors from the body are absorbed both into the lungs and into the pores of the whole body. Need more to be said to show the importance of having bed-rooms well ventilated and of thoroughly airing the sheets, coverlets, and mattresses, in the morning, before packing them, up in the form of a neatly made bed?

On motion, a Committee of three be appointed to draft resolutions of thanks. The following were reported and adopted:

Resolved, That we present to the Rev. J. M. Shields and the Trustees of the Presbyterian church, our sincere thanks for their kindness in granting us permission to use their church for the address by our most worthy Grand Sire, James B. Nicholson, on the occasion of the dedication of our new Hall on the first inst.

Resolved, That we present to the Rev. J. Murray and the Trustees of the Methodist church, our sincere thanks for their kindness in offering us (if we needed it) the use of said church for the same purpose; and also for their kindness in loaning us the use of their benches for the supper the same evening.

Resolved, That we tender our sincere thanks to the Choir, and more particularly to the ladies and gentlemen (not connected with our Order) for their great kindness in entertaining us the whole day with their vocal and instrumental talent; and also not forgetting Mrs. George Fry, who lent her new organ for the occasion.

Resolved, That our sincere and heartfelt thanks are due to the ladies connected with the supper arrangement, who fed on that evening upward of six hundred persons, and none went empty away. Their judicious and good management was, indeed, deserving of great praise.

Resolved, That our thanks are warmly offered to the editors of the county papers for the manner in which they published the notice of our dedication, and we further ask them to favor us with an insertion of the above resolutions.

By order of Committee.

The Cumulative Plan of Voting.—Bloomsburg, Columbia county, Pa., had an act passed for the government of elections in that borough, by the Legislature of 1870. The Bloomsburg law was last winter made a general law, so far as the election of Town Councilmen are concerned; and as our election next Friday will be held in pursuance of its provisions, we herewith publish it for the benefit of "our free and independent electors:"

Section 4. To the end that the electors of Bloomsburg may exercise their right of suffrage freely and without undue constraint, and may obtain for themselves complete representation in their local government, the plan of the free vote shall be lawful, and is hereby authorized in the elections for officers of said town, and for all officers to be chosen by them exclusively; in any case where more persons than one are to be chosen in said town to the same office, for the same time or term of service, each voter duly qualified shall be entitled to as many votes as the number of persons to be so chosen, and may poll his votes as follows, to wit:

First. Where two persons are to be chosen, he may give one vote to each of two candidates or two votes to one.

Second. Where three persons are to be chosen, he may give one vote to each of three candidates, two votes to one candidate and one to another, one vote and a half to each of two candidates or three votes to one.

Third. Where four persons are to be chosen, he may give one vote to each of four candidates, one vote and one-third to each of three, two votes to each of two or four votes to one.

Fourth. Where six persons are to be chosen, he may give one vote to each of six candidates, one vote and a-half to each of four, two votes to each of three, three votes to each of two, or six votes to one.

In every case the candidates highest in vote shall be declared elected; whenever a voter shall intend to give more votes than one or to give a fraction of a vote to any candidate, he shall express his intention distinctly and clearly upon the face of his ballot, otherwise but one vote shall be counted and allowed to such candidate.

Sick Headache.—Much sick headache is caused by overloading the stomach—by indigestion. It may be relieved by drinking very freely of warm water, whether it produces vomiting or not. If the feet are cold, warm them or bathe them in water as hot as you can bear it. Soda or other ashes in the water will do good. If the pain is very severe, apply a cloth wrung out of hot water to the head, pack the head as it were. To prevent it, let plainness, simplicity, and temperance preside at your table. In some cases medicine is necessary; but if the above is properly carried out, almost immediate relief is experienced.

We take great pleasure in refering our readers to the local advertisements of the firm of J. M. Cornelius & Co., Vanport. The Influence of Temper on Health.—Excessive labor, exposure to wet and cold, deprivation of sufficient quantities of necessary and wholesome food, habitual bad lodging, sloth, and intemperance, are all deadly enemies to human life; but they are none of them so bad as violent and ungoverned passions. Men and women have survived all these and at least reached an extreme old age; but it may be safely doubted whether a single instance can be found of a man of a violent and irascible temper, habitually subject to storms of ungovernable passion, who has arrived at a very advanced period of life. It is, therefore, a matter of the highest importance to every one desirous to preserve "a sound mind in a sound body," so that the brittle vessel of life may glide down the streams of time smoothly and securely, instead of being continually tossed about midst rocks and shoals which endanger its existence, to have a special care amidst all the vicissitudes and trials of life, to maintain a quiet possession of his own spirit. Hall's Journal of Health.

Monongahela City Items and River Trade

Mr. Weyand: There is not much said here at this time on the subject of politics. The lecture room of the new Presbyterian Church, Rev. W. O. Campbell pastor, is finished and will be occupied by the congregation as soon as the extra furniture ordered by the building committee comes to hand and is properly adjusted in this room. The audience room of this church will most likely not be finished out and be ready for occupancy for several months to come.

The Methodist congregation, Rev. Dr. Miller, pastor, still continue to worship in the basement of their church, not as yet having made any effort toward the completion of the large audience room of this church.

The contest here for and against tavern licenses was sharp and animated.—The Good Templers, who were determined on carrying their point, were on the alert. They, in connection with other temperance men, made a grand effort at the February term of our Court to prevent the granting of licenses to sell the "ardent" here, and hereabout, and came out of the contest triumphant over the formidable opposition arrayed against them in behalf of licenses. Flushed and rampant with victory, for the second or third time in this license matter, they now declare in their exhileration, that they will dry up every ardent liquor hole in and about the place, matters not behind whose sign or counter the fiery stream is found issuing forth.

Washington's birth-day passed off, here, without any demonstration worthy of note. Real estate is rapidly advancing in price in this little city and vicinity. On the business streets, unoccupied grounds are held at $100@$125 per foot. Several lots of ground have been recently sold, one mile west of the city line, at from $1,000 up to $2,000 per acre; and some are holding at much higher figures, in the same locality or near it.

It is thought by a number, here, that the railroad excitement in this region is really doing more to aid the owners of real estate to sell houses and grounds at balloon prices than the two expected railroads, being laid out through here, will ever do,—taking it for granted they will soon be built, which may admit of doubt.

The ten-pin alley which was constructed here a few months since, near an alley called "Pig-Alley," is fully equipped with its rolling stock, and the other essential requisites to make it a paying concern. As a noisey establishment; a little too much so for the immediate neighborhood. Young men whose early training has been slightly overlooked, or neglected by their parents, are the principal patronizers and actors in this new place of amusement, where I learn these gents say they heve "lots of fun."

Our line steamers, which ply upon the bosom of the Monongahela are now doing a good business in the transmission of passengers and freight, and will not likely be compelled again to suspend their trips for the present season on account of ice.

The numerous coal works along the River have nearly all resumed, and are now in full operation; but, as there is as yet no rise in the river, none but the smaller class of coal barges can be floated out to the market below. A. O.

March 2, 1872.

Pennsylvania Legislature.

Senate, March 4.—Nothing of public and general interest occurred in either House.

Senate, March 5.—The bill fixing the fees of the Clerk of the Orphan's Court of Beaver county, passed. The bill extending to Beaver Falls the provisions of the act consolidating Philadelphia, passed February 2d, 1854, and preventing frauds at elections, also passed. The bill incorporating the Smith's Ferry Oil Transportation Company, was reported as committed.

House.—No action was had of interest to our citizens. The entire session was occupied with local and private legislation.

Senate, March 6.—A bill was introduced to incorporate the Broadway Hall, New Brighton. Mr. Graham advocated his bill, giving the truth in evidence, in cases of libel; it was postponed. The bill legalizing rents or leases of dwellings to women living separate from their husbands, passed. The bill to secure separate earnings to married women, passed second reading. The bill to increase Supreme Judges to six, passed.

House.—The supplement to the act relating to the Allegheny prison—similar to the one vetoed, with the objectionable sections stricken out—passed. The bill incorporating the Oil Producers' Oil Pipe Company, passed. A bill was introduced to repeal the act to revise, consolidate and amend the several laws taxing corporations, banks and brokers which imposes a tax of three per cent. on net earnings and incomes; also, one to amend the charter of the U. P. Board of Publication. The Joint Committee on Mines and Mining met in the open Senate chamber this evening, the room being crowded, to consider the bituminous mining bills now before them. Mr. Soseph Walton, of Allegheny, and Mr. John F. Dravo, of Allegheny, on behalf of the operators, spoke against the screen bill. Mr. Woolslayer represented the miners for the screen bill.

Senate, March 7.—The bill to protect the labor of miners in the bituminous coal regions was reported. A bill was passed to compel witnesses to appear and testify before legislative committees under penalty of fine and imprisonment. A bill was introduced to protect physicians and surgeons from vexatious prosecutions. A bill passed requiring the State Treasurer to demand from the General Government the payment of sums of money embezzled by George O Evans. The bill securing separate earnings to married women, passed finally. The bill providing that in criminal trials, not above the grade of misdemeanor the person charged shall be a competent witness; but his neglect or refusal to testify shall not be construed against him; but not in case of perjury or forgery. A bill extending the act relative to dower, to actions where the plaintiff died before the passage of said act, was passed. The bill to prohibit the sale of liquor on election days, was passed. A resolution to extend the session till the 16th of April, passed. The bill to permit the truth to be given in evidence in libel cases was taken up, but without definite action, laid over.

House.—Some discussion was had on the bill for the organization of the National Guard, which was made the special order for the 20th inst. The House then passed the Senate joint resolution for the collection of moneys paid to G. O. Evans by the U. S. Government; also the Senate bill punishing recusant witnesses summoned before Legislative Committees.

Senate, March 8.—The Constitutional Reform Committee reported the House bill for a Constitutional Convention, with amendments—providing for 121 delegates to be elected on the cumulative plan. The Committee on Retrenchment recommended the Auditor General to pass the bills for refitting the Legislative Halls. The Committee on Railroads was instructed to investigate the manner in which a supplement to the Juniata & State Line Railroad had been smuggled through the Legislature.

House.—The House defeated the Senate joint resolution prolonging the session until the 16th of April. Nothing else of interest.

Religious Disquisition, No. 1.

BY PARVUS HOMO.

I think, Mr. Editor, it is very creditable to you editors, and also kind, to publish so cheerfully an occasional religious communication among all your political speculations; and, I doubt not, many of your readers are glad to have their minds diverted somewhat into some other channel; at least one so said to me a moment ago. Isaiah, you know, says—xxxii. 20—"Blessed are ye that sow beside all waters."

"Good morning, parson Hubbard; I called to bring a little bill which I have against you. If it is convenient I should like to have you settle it, as I am going out of town to-morrow."

The minister looked as if a blow had struck him. He knew what Daniel Clark's—the old brick-layer's—bill was for. As a stone-mason the man had been employed to lay the brick in Mrs. Hubbard's grave. It had hurt the feelings of the mourning husband that so wicked a man had been engaged to do it; but he had been assured by his deacons that Daniel Clark was a good workman, and that no one else could be found to perform the labor in season. Mr. Hubbard had hoped that he should not see the man himself, and to avoid it had requested his friend, Deacon Ward, to settle with him. But the deacon being absent when Mr. Clark happened to want the money, the latter went directly to the minister. Mr. Hubbard knew the man as a bold transgressor, and was loth to connect him with any ministrations to his lamented dead. But Dan Clark had no soft scruples, and immediately tendered the bill of which he had spoken.

"It is two dollars, I believe," said the minister, without opening the paper; "here is your money, Mr. Clark."

"Yes, thank you," replied the mason, as the amount was laid in his hand. "You see, parson," he added, apologetically, "I shouldn't have called for the money so soon only I am going away, and may be gone a year or two; and didn't know as I should find you here when I came back; ministers don't stay always in one place, you know."

A serious thought flashed upon Mr. Hubbard; a thought which conquered his repulsion to Daniel Clark, and warmed his heart to duty towards him. He spoke quickly and earnestly:

"You did right, Mr. Clark, to bring your bill. Your work was well done, I am told; and I thank you for it. If you are going away, I may never see you again, as you truly intimated; but I can not let you go without a word of counsel. For, though you are not one of my parishioners, you are at least a fellow-townsman, and"—

—"O, parson, don't preach me a sermon" interrupted the godless man. "I haven't heard one in thirteen years, and I am in too much of a hurry now."

"I will not bore you, neighbor; I only want to ask you two questions. If there is no change in your heart and life till some fellow-man performs for you what you have done for my departed one, what will become of you? If a change is needful, when will you begin to make it?"

"Those are pretty hard questions, parson; guess you don't expect me to answer 'em, though."

"No, Mr. Clark, but I do beg you would think of them."

"Well, I can't promise; but, thank 'ee anyway, and good-bye."

"Good-bye, Mr. Clark."

And so the mason went his way. Two years passed, and Mr. Hubbard sat in his study planning a sermon for the 10th anniversary of his settlement at Rockyville. He was feeling a little dispondent over the retrospection of his ministry there. Much good seed had been sown, but it had not sprung up as he had hoped to see it; especially was this the case with the openly wicked. (Balance next week—good).

GOD GIVE US MEN.

God give us men. A time like this demands
Strong minds; great hearts, true faith, and ready hands:
Men whom the lust of office does not kill;
Men whom the spoils of office cannot buy;
Men who possess opinions and a will;
Men who have honor—men who will not lie;
Men who can stand before a demagogue
And scorn his treacherous flatteries without winking;
Tall men sun crowned, who live above the fog
In public duty and in private thinking—
For while the rabble with their thumb-worn creeds
Their large professions and their little deeds,
Mingle in selfish strife, lo! Freedom weeps,
Wrong rules the land, and waiting Justice keeps.

The Beaver County Sabbath School Convention met pursuant to call in the Presbyterian church in New Brighton, on March 1st, 1872, at 10 o'clock, and was called to order by Rev. W. H. Locke, V. P., in the absence of Hon. J. S. Wilson, President. O. R. Coe of Rochester, was elected temporary Sec. The first half-hour was spent in devotional exercises. The President then introduced Rev. G. A. Peltz, State Secretary, who spoke for a short time on the real intent of the Sunday school and of the S. S. teaching. He recommended local institutes as a means for improving the teachers. He then spoke of the difference between the Sabbath schools of the present and the past, especially in their origin. Messrs. Cooper, Alexander and Bradford were appointed a committee to nominate officers for the ensuing year. A list of delegates and the schools represented by them severally was then made out. The Committee on Nomination reported as follows, viz. President, Maj. J. A. Cline, of Beaver Falls; Vice President, Rev. D. Jones, of New Brighton; Secretary, R. T. Taylor, D. D. of Beaver; Treasurer, O. R. Coe, of Rochester; which report was adopted and the committee discharged. It was resolved that the Convention should appoint the Executive Committee. W. W. Mair, esq., was chosen Chairman, and Messrs. Alexander, Bradford, Shields and Taylor members. On motion,

Resolved, That the next annual meeting of the Sabbath School Association be held in the Presbyterian church of Bridgewater.

At this point R. H. Cooper was chosen Secretary for the remaining sessions. Convention then took recess until 2 p. m.

At 2 p. m. re-assembled and opened with devotional exercises. The first subject taken up was The relation of parents to the Sabbath School opened by Rev. W. G. Taylor. He recommended that parents should insist upon regularity of attendance, should mark the rapid flight of time, should set an example by studying the Scriptures more themselves, use means to get the children interested in the word of God, pray with them, and endeavor to interest them in their teachers. After singing two verses of the hymn "Nearer my God to Thee," the subject was discussed briefly by the Convention. Mr. Peltz said the congregation should furnish all the money necessary for carrying on the Sabbath-school work just as they pay the pastor's salary; there should be co-operation between parents and teachers; and parents should make it a point to thank the teachers for their interest in the pupils.

The following was then presented by Mr. Mair, and unanimously passed:

Resolved, That those of us members of this convention, who are parents, do realize and appreciate our intimate relations with the Sabbath school, and do hereby solemnly pledge ourselves before God to extend to the school, to the extent of our ability, our co-operation, our sympathies, our means and our prayers.

Rev. D. P. Lowary then opened the discussion upon "The Teacher's Work and Qualifications." The work is permanent, one and indivisible, to bring the scholars to Jesus; 'tis the work of the soul's salvation; it must be the "sycamore tree;" the pupil should be made to feel and appreciate this. Earnest, prayerful effort to be succeeded by the influence of God's Spirit, which will not be withheld when properly sought, will accomplish this great work. The teacher should study God's Word, boil it down, take the essence to the class, to which he should always resort immediately from the closet. Volunteer speeches were made by Rev. B. C. Critchlow, C. C. Riggs, D. D., Rev. James M. Shields, and Rev. G. A. Peltz.

On motion, Rev. Wallace was excused from presenting "Infant School Teaching," and Mr. Peltz was requested to do it. The following resolutions were then adopted, viz:

Resolved, That the Executive Committee be instructed to seek out in every township and borough a person to act as Secretary for that field and to appoint such person thereto.

Resolved, That at the option of the Executive Committee they appoint a Corresponding Secretary to have special charge of the details of county work.

Recess until 7 o'clock.

Convention met at 7 o'clock. Opened with singing and prayer, led by Dr. Riggs. The minutes of the previous sessions were read and approved. Rev. Peltz then introduced the subject of "Infant School Teaching." He read Luke 16th chapter, verses 19th to 26th inclusive, and gave his mode of teaching. He then gave an instructive, practical and beneficial black-board exercise.

A collection was then taken up to defray the expenses of the convention. A short time was devoted to the question drawer and various questions read, which were answered by Mr. Peltz.

Mr. Peltz spoke on the general Sabbath-school work. Text—"Stop the Leaks." Teachers responsible for their scholars, should look after them, and encourage them by manifesting love for them; also to be careful in regard to their influence that it may be of such a character as will promote the impressions made by their teaching. Encouraged all to work, and to work earnestly for the cause in which we are enlisted; asking God to bless us, he closed his remarks. Convention addressed by the President, Rev. Locke. He spoke of the good results of this meeting and hoped we would all go home benefitted, and resolved to work more earnestly for Christ. Sung part of a hymn, and prayer was offered by Brother Peltz. Adjourned with benediction by Brother Locke.

OBITUARY.

JOHNSTON.—On the 28th of February, 1872, Miss Mary Belle Johnston, in the 15th year of her age; oldest daughter of Mr. Silas and Mrs. Eliza Johnston, of South Beaver township, Beaver county, Pa.

The subject of this notice was a young woman of fine promise—affectionate in her manners, kind-hearted, and generous in her intercourse. As a scholar at school she was very highly esteemed by her teachers, and always tried to make them happy by close attention to her studies, and noble example in the school room. She ever elicited praise for her good humor and her forgiving disposition. She was always ready to listen to good advice from her instructors, or any visitor who might be called on to address the scholars. It has been noticed, when remarks were made of a serious nature, and warning the scholars that they should live so that they would be ready to die, that she gave remarkable attention to such thoughts. She was a great lover of the Sabbath school and all its teachings, and was very highly esteemed by her ministers and teachers. Belle was one of those happy, lovely dispositioned girls, that always have friends, and of whose society the good and the noble are never weary. An obedient daughter, a loving, affectionate sister, a kind companion, a sunbeam in society, a sanctuary's grace gone. She gave unmistakable evidence to her father, mother, and all who were acquainted with her, that she died the death of the righteous. Near the closing scene religious exercises conducted and engaged in by the family, were, it is believed, understood by her in the hour of "man's greatest need." She folded her arms across her breast, and the spirit fled; giving evidence that for her "to die was gain." Although death treads with leaden feet and has an icy hand, that peaceful smile, which betokened the serenity of the soul within, could not be removed from her sweet, pale face. It was changed, indeed, but as the changed appearance of the sun's disc at eventide only proclaims its circuit run, and then he silently goes to rest, showering back upon the retiring world the richest profusion of gorgeous golden tints to proclaim his departure, and also to announce his resplendent coming again in the morning; so her angel countenance proclaimed her work all done, and the bright halo of heavenly peace which encircled her brow in death, reflected the power of a Savior's love shining into the souls of surviving friends, plainly saying to them "Mary Belle has gone to rest. She sleeps in Jesus. She will come again in the morning, gloriously beautiful; for those who sleep in Jesus will God bring with him; and they shall be like him, for they shall see him as he is."

The last duty was performed by a large procession following to the grave all that was mortal. Friend.

ON THE DEATH OF MISS MARY BELLE JOHNSTON.

Physician's skill, relation's care,
And parent's tenderest love,
The brother's groan, the sister's tear,
All unavailing prove.

Dear Mary Belle must away,
Away to worlds unknown,
Nor will another moment stay,
For all that can be done

I pity the deploring pair,
Who their dear Mary mourn,
Now gone to make a visit where
She never shall return.

Snatched from the charms of fond delight
With every female friend,
She bids them all a long good-night,
And leaves the world behind.

How cheerfully may we lay the dust
Of Belle into the tomb,
When we have solid ground to trust
That she has but gone home.

Home to her Father's house above,
To join the general song,
And share the treasures of his love
With the thrice happy throng.

Why should we thus be bathed in tears,
Why feel severe annoy,
Since she triumphs over all her fears,
And shares eternal joy?

Ravished with everlasting charms,
And crowned with glory bright,
She rests between Emanuel's arms,
And feasts on pure delight.

"Oh, trifle not your time away,
Though youth be in its bloom!
Prepare now for your dying day,
And mind the world to come." F.

Orthography.—There are ten vowels in our language, yet nearly all the books tell us there are sixteen. A careful analysis of the vowels will convince any one that there are not sixteen.

Most authors, if not all of them, claim that i represents two sounds: a long sound, as heard in ice, and a short sound as in it. This is not true; i in it is an element, but its long sound is a diphtong,—is a union of the grave sound of a, and the long sound of e. The letter a, some claim, represents six sounds; but others claim that it represents only four; and these are heard in ate, arm, all and at. The other two sounds which some claim are heard in such words as air and ask, are merely things of the imagination, and are "without form and void." E represents two sounds, as in met and meet; o has one, as heard in old; and u has two, as in rule and up. It is asserted, I know, that o and u have each three sounds; but this is not correct, as we shall see after a little examination. The sound of o in on, which is called its short sound in all the books, is nothing more than a short quantity of a as in all; and the sound of u in full is the sound of o in ooze, or u in rule, shortened in quantity. What is usually called the long sound of u as heard in use, mule, immure, etc., is the same sound that is heard in few, new, pew, and many other words; and is nothing but a coalescence of the sound of e as in meet and o as in ooze. It is not, therefore, a simple or elementary sound. I disposed of w and y in my last article by showing that the former is simply o as in ooze, and the latter e as in meet.

Inasmuch as all the vowels have been analyzed, the consonants now demand our attention. Of these there are nineteen, but I showed clearly in a former paper that c, q and x have no sounds of their own; and, consequently represent no elements that are not represented by other letters. Throwing these out, we have only sixteen consonants as true representatives of elementary sounds; but we shall soon see, however, that these sixteen consonants are required, like the vowels to represent elements exceeding in number their aggregate.—The characters b, d, f, g, h, j, k, l, m, n, p, r, s, t, v and z, each represent an element; but they, singly, do not represent all the subvocals and aspirates of our tongue. There are the elementary sounds represented by z in azure and s in leisure, ch in chair, ng in ring, th in thin, th in that and sh in show, to be added to those which the consonants represent in other positions; which make in all twenty-two subvocals and aspirates. Of this number f, h, k, p, s, t, ch, sh and th as in thin, are aspirates; hence there are thirteen vocals and nine aspirates; and these added to the ten vocals give an aggregate of thirty-two elementary sounds in the English language.

I believe that, in correct and natural pronunciation, no more than 32 elementary sounds are ever heard. These sounds are represented by twenty-three letters; for the reader will bear in mind that c is an equivalent of k and s, q of k, and x of ks. With these elements, one hundred thousand words are uttered by the voice, and spelled on the printed page! And, what is still more wonderful, not one of that vast multitude of words can be spoken without one or more of the ten sounds called vocals; or written without one or more of the five letters called vowels. the one word myrrh may seem a contradiction of my statement, but I beg leave to remind the reader that in this instance y is an equivalent for u as heard in burr.

These facts in relation to the elements of our tongue cannot fail to impress every thoughtful person with profound admiration for the wonderful mechanism of spoken and written language; and not only this, but it should fill all with a deep sense of thankfulness to God that he has blessed us with a gift of such great value, from which we derive such an infinite deal of happiness. Speech is, indeed, the great frontier that marks the boundary between man and the brute creation. Without this gift men would be walking inanities, and life little less than a dumb show. G. L. E.

SELECT MISCELLANY.

THE WAY OF THE TRANSGRESSOR IS HARD.

At 11 o'clock on Saturday week a close carriage drove up to the Coates street entrance of the Eastern Penitentiary. The door of the vehicle opened, and a man with a big diamond on his bosom alighted. He helped from the carriage another man, in citizens' dress. The latter wore a slouch hat, a brown overcoat, and black necktie. He had a moustache and small chin whiskers, and his face was very pale. Then another man, also with a big diamond in his shirt, emerged from the carriage. He was followed by a younger man in citizens' dress. The men with big diamonds were deputy sheriffs.

The four advanced to the huge stone entrance and stopped before a massive iron door. One of the deputy sheriffs pulled a little brass knob. Soon a harsh, grating noise was heard and a small wicket in the huge iron door opened. The deputy sheriffs, accompanied by the two persons in citizens' dress, walked in.

THE HOUR OF TRIAL.

"Straight ahead to the warden's office," said Mr. Ogden, the gatekeeper. The deputies nodded, but said nothing. As the little wicket closed again with a clang, the man in the brown overcoat gave a start and his face turned ashy pale. He glanced at the solid masonry and then looked furtively at the great iron door through which he had just entered. Then a sigh escaped him, and, dropping his eyes on the stone pavement, he tottered off with the officer.

To the warden's office was but a step.

The deputy Sheriffs opened the door and walked in. They were evidently expected. The prison clerk, Mr. A. L. Ourt, sat on a high stool behind a desk. He got down a great book, and opening it picked up a pen. He looked at the warden, who was standing by. The deputy Sheriffs approached the latter and handed him some papers. Meanwhile the gentleman in the brown overcoat half-faintingly, dropped into a seat. The warden read the papers and handed them to the clerk. He then looked at the two prisoners in citizen's dress and bowed coldly to the man in the brown overcoat.

THE EXAMINATION

The clerk glanced over the papers, and then gave a little cough. He [illegible] picked up the pen and [illegible] to the fainting figure in the chair. The man in the brown overcoat tottered over toward the desk.

"What is your name, sir?" asked the clerk.

"Joseph F. Marcer," was the answer in a faltering voice.

"What is your age?"

"Thirty-seven."

The clerk then nodded to a deputy keeper. The officer approached with a [illegible] marked [illegible] feet and [illegible]. He [illegible] up behind the prisoner's back and took a good look over the top of his head.

"[illegible] feet [illegible] inches," he called in a cold, [illegible] voice. The clerk nodded and put it down. The deputy took a tape and drew it around the prisoner's chest.

"Thirty-six inches, [illegible]." The clerk nodded and put it down.

"[illegible] and [illegible] inches," said the keeper, after another measurement. The clerk nodded and put it down.

Then followed a critical examination of the prisoner's eyes, hair, complexion, marks or scars, and other physical peculiarities, all of which were duly described in the huge ledger. The clerk then nodded to the man in the brown overcoat, and with a [illegible] he [illegible] away from the desk.

YERKES.

"Next man!" said the clerk. The other young man advanced to the desk.

"What is your name?" said the clerk.

"Charles T. Yerkes."

"Age?"

"Forty."

Precisely the same examination was then gone through with as in the case of the other prisoner. After all the entries had been made the clerk handed a paper to the deputy sheriffs and they departed. He then gave two tickets to the under-keeper. "This way," said the latter and he moved toward the door. The two prisoners followed him. In fifteen minutes they reappeared from another door dressed in new gray trowsers and gray jackets. They also wore gray caps.

"Marcer in 71 and the other one in 89," said the clerk. The keeper nodded.

"Come along," said he, and the three slowly disappeared across the carriageway and up the stone staircase. The keeper inserted a massive key, the great iron door opened heavily, and the two passed. It closed again with a clank.

"I suppose," said the reporter, "that is the end?"

"Yes, sir," said the clerk "that is the end. They are buried from the world for a long time, and perhaps forever."

From the following taken from the Day it would appear that the people of Philadelphia seriously object to State officials interfering with their [illegible] affairs:

"It was announced from Harrisburg that a petition numerously signed, and accompanied by a large number of letters, is now before Governor Geary, asking for the pardon of Marcer and Yerkes. Auditor General Hartranft joined State Treasurer Mackey in a letter appealing for this pardon as an act of [illegible] mercy and [illegible] policy.

Even those [illegible] anxious for the pardon of the [illegible] named, must regard the interference of General Hartranft and Mr. Mackey as impertinent. General Hartranft, as Auditor General and candidate for next governor of the State, might well stand aloof in this case, and not use, or abuse, his official influence to interfere with the operation of the laws or the course of justice, and Mr. Mackey, whose course as State Treasurer, in depositing public funds with Yerkes, was similar to that of Marcer, and was an analogous offense, cuts a very ridiculous figure in the attitude of a petitioner for Marcer's pardon. Does he desire to establish a precedent for his own benefit, in case he should be indicted and convicted as Marcer was, for a misuse of the people's money. His conduct "squints" in that direction. Messrs. Hartranft and Mackey should [illegible] it to the citizens of Philadelphia, and to the judges, jury, and prosecuting officers who [illegible] convicted, and sentenced Marcer and Yerkes, to petition for their pardon. There is a strong feeling here in favor of pardoning them; but the interference of these State officers, one of whom would appear to be personally interested in the matter, may prejudice the cause of the imprisoned men in the estimation of Philadelphia."

A dispatch from Council Bluffs, dated March 21, says Albert Willard, well known throughout the western country as the pioneer of the freight railroad across the plains, and more recently as a farmer living four miles east of this city, while proceeding home Thursday night, became lost on the prairies, and on trying to return to the road, his team was precipitated down an embankment ten feet high, throwing Mr. Willard headlong into a deep, narrow washout at the foot of the embankment, in such a manner that he was unable to extricate himself, and in which position he was found yesterday morning at five o'clock. He was alive when found, but when taken out, after two hours' hard work, he had just breathed his last. Mr. Willard was for many years connected with the Western Stage Company, and widely known.

JAPANESE EMBASSY.

Formal Reception by the President—Speeches on the Occasion.

WASHINGTON, March 4, 1872.

The Japanese embassy were presented to the President to-day, and a complimentary speech was made by the Japanese minister on introducing the embassy, followed by an address from Iwakura and a response by President Grant. The members of the Cabinet were present, together with all the army and naval dignitaries in full uniform, together with Vice President Colfax and Speaker Blaine, etc.

The following is the address of the Ambassador to the President, delivered by Iawakura:

"His Majesty, the Emperor of Japan, our august sovereign, has sought since the achievement of our national reconstruction, to attain a more perfect organization in the administrative power of his Government. He has studied with interest the results attained by western nations. Having a sincere desire to establish permanent and friendly relations with foreign powers on a still closer footing, he has commissioned us his Ambassadors Extraordinary to all powers having treaties with Japan. Upon the soil of your country we first present our credentials, delivering to you personally the letter of our august soverign at this public official audience. The objects of the mission with which we are charged by our Government are somewhat set forth in this letter. We are authorized to consult with your Government on all international questions, directing our efforts to promote and develop wide commercial relations and draw into closer bonds the strong friendship already existing between our respective people. Thus we hope to gain a fresh impulse in progress, gaining good from every form of civilization. This we shall aim to do while in the exercise of strict integrity to our own national interests, so trustingly confided by a generous soverign, and shall earnestly hope to receive your kind co-operation in facilitating the task assigned to us by our Government. We gladly avail ourselves of this happy meeting to convey personally to your excellency our sincere wishes for your continued prosperity and happiness, and as national representatives we extend the same wish to all the people of the United States."

The President then responded:

"Gentlemen—I am gratified that this country and that of my administration will be distinguished in history as the first which has received an Embassy from a nation with which the United States was first to establish diplomatic and commercial intercourse. The objects which you say have given rise to your mission do honor to the intelligence and wisdom of your sovereign and reflect credit on you in having been chosen as the instrument for carrying them into effect. The time must be regarded as gone, never to return, when any nation can keep apart from all and expect to enjoy prosperity and happiness which depend more or less upon the mutual adoption of improvements, not only the science of government, but on those other sciences and arts which contribute to the dignity of mankind and to national wealth and power. Though Japan is one of the most ancient of organized communities, and the United States ranks among the most recent, we flatter ourselves that we have made some improvements on the political institutions of the nations from whom we are descended. Our experience leads us to the belief that the wealth, power and happiness of a people are advanced by their encouragement of trade and commercial intercourse with other powers; by the elevation and dignity of labor, by the practical adaptation of science to manufactures and arts; by increased facilities of frequent and rapid communication between different parts of the country, by the encouragement of emigration, which brings with it the varied habits and divers geniuses of industry of other lands; by a free press, and by freedom of thought and conscience and liberal toleration in matters of religion not only to citizens, but to all foreigners resident among us. It will be a pleasure to us to enter on that consultation on international questions which you say you are authorized to engage. The improvement of commercial relations between our respective countries is important and desirable, and cannot fail to strengthen the bonds which unite us. I will heartily co operate in so desirable an object. Your kind wishes for me personally, gentlemen, are cordially reciprocated. I trust that your abode with us may be agreeable to you, and may contribute to more intimate acquaintance and intercourse between our respective people."

Recipe for a Cosy Room.

The most thoroughly comfortable room is a half library, half drawing-room. Let there be book shelves to the hight of five feet round the room. Let the walls be hung with pictures and prints. Put vases of flowers here and there. Let a small table, with judiciously straddleing legs and happy turn for recovering its balance when it gets knocks which will send an ordinary small table over, be forever in reach of an easy chair.

Let the small table always cary after dusk an antique silver chandlestick, of Queen Anne's or George the First's time, if possible—modern plate is generally inferior to that from 1600 to 1750—holding a huge wax candle. Let every chair be low, the seat very long—this, for men at least, gives rest—and whatever else you neglect, do not omit to have the hind legs of your chairs shorter than those in front.

Have foot-stools lurking in corners—not where they will be stumbled over. In winter let a glorious wood-fire blaze on the hearth.

Don't let your room be too tidy or too untidy.

Have books, newspapers, work lying about. A writing-table near a window. Good pens, sharp penknives, nice paper.

Keep an eye on the thermometer. Allow no loud ticking clock in the room. Let a delightful, ingratiating mannered dog—who, as William III. said of Godolphin, is never, never in the way and never out of the way, never commits a breach of canine decorum, and is ever ready to reciprocate caresses—lie on the soft, thick hearth-rug.

Fill this room with pleasant people as often as possible.

A Stable Institution.

Just at the period when all stable-men were complaining that the horse ointments of the day were unstable remedies, the Mustang Liniment made its entree in Missouri, without any flourish of trumpets, within one year, became the favorite embrocation for the external distempers and injuries of horses and cattle in all the Western and Southern States.

From that time to this, it has never had a rival in the estimation of accomplished horsemen; nor is its household reputation as a cure for rheumatism, neuralgia, sore nipples and caked breasts, tumors, mumps, sore throat, earache, tooth-ache, bruises, burns, wounds and sprains, a whit behind its celebrity as a horse Liniment. The Mothers of America know its value, and apply it promptly to the external injuries of the "rising generation," and in fact there is not a city or township in the United States where the Mustang Liniment is not regarded by both sexes and every class, as a blessing to the community.

The Roman Catholic Bishop of Savanah, Ga., has issued a vigorously written "pastoral" to the clergy and laity of his diocese upon the subject of temperance. In this document the Bishop of Georgia quotes largely, and with warm approbation, from the temperance lecture delivered by the Bishop of Newark, N. J. It is encouraging to find a prelate so far deviating from ecclesiastical routine as to tell his people that "health is of all treasures the most valuable—the very life of life," taking care to add that to health there is no more fatal enemy than strong-drinking, and that "those who sow in false joy must expect to reap in bitterness

Manhood: How Lost, How Restored

Just published, a new edition of Dr. Culverwell's Celebrated Essay on the radical cure (without medicine) of Spermatorrhœa or Seminal Weakness, Involuntary Seminal Losses, IMPOTENCY, Mental and Physical Incapacity, Impediments to Marriage, etc.; also, CONSUMPTION, EPILEPSY, and FITS, induced by self-indulgence or sexual extravagance.

Applications promptly attended to, and Policies written without delay, and at fair rates and liberal terms. Losses liberally adjusted and promptly paid. INSURE TO-DAY! By one day's delay you may lose the savings of years. Delays are dangerous, and life uncertain, therefore, Insure to-day! ORGANIZED 1851.

BERKSHIRE

LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY,

Home office, Pittsfield, Mass.

Mutual protection is secured to the Policy Holders of this company by a Special Law of the State. For example: Suppose you are thirty five years of age, and take an ordinary Life Policy. If you should make ONE payment, and should fail to make the SECOND payment when due, you still remain insured during the second year and three days of the third year. If you die during the two years and three days, your family will receive the full amount of the Policy, less only the one annual premium and interest.

One Annual Payment will keep you insured 2 years and three days. Two Annual Payments will keep your insured 4 years and 12 days. Three Annual Payments will keep you insured 6 years and 27 days. Four annual payments will keep you insured 8 years and 46 days. Five Annual Payments will keep you insured 10 years and 56 days. Six Annual Payments will keep you insured 12 years and 14 days. This protection applies to any age, and is expressed in every Policy.

The Advantages of such Protection.

New York, March 11, 1870.

W. H. GREENE, late of New York, insured a few years since in the Berkshire Life Insurance Company for $4,500; but, owing to misfortune in business, was unable to make any payment to the Company during one year and ten months prior to his decease, which occurred January 12, 1870.

I have this day received at the New York office of the Company, 271 Broadway corner of Chambers street, Three thousand two hundred and ninety-nine dollars, this being the full amount due to his widow, after deducting the overdue payments and interest.

W. B. HARRISON, 107 Broadway.

A Special Law of the State of Massachusetts

Provides that if you should fail to make your payment when due, and still preserve the conditions of the Policy, you will remain insured for a certain number of years and days thereafter, and if death occurs during that time the Policy will be paid as above.

The ratio of expenses to receipts in this Company is smaller than the average of all the Companies doing business in the United States.

The True Benefits of Life Insurance.—It is time that those who seek the true benefits of Life Insurance should understand that Companies which strive to do the largest business and persistently ignore future liabilities, are by no means the best companies in which to insure.

It is the aim of the Officers and Directors of the Berkshire to do a safe, progressive business, which shall each year add to the strength and stability of the Company, and at the same time furnish its members with more Insurance, larger Dividends, and greater advantages than can be realized in any other Company.

Annual Cash Dividends.—This Company is Strictly Mutual, and divides all the profits among the Policy Holders, on the Contribution Plan. As your Cash Dividends increase, the future payments which you make will gradually decrease. Dividends may be added to the Policy, and are never forfeited by the non-payment of premiums, but may at any time be converted into Cash. EBEN ALLISON, Agent.

DOCTOR PIERCE'S ALT. EXT. OR GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY

CURES DISEASES OF THE

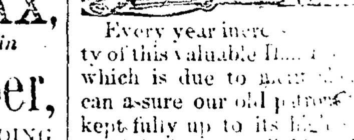

THROAT, LUNGS, LIVER & BLOOD

In the wonderful medicine to which the afflicted are above pointed for relief, the discoverer believes he has combined in harmony more of nature's most sovereign curative properties, which God has instilled into the vegetable kingdom for healing the sick, than were ever before combined in one medicine. The evidence of this fact is found in the great variety of most obstinate diseases which it has been found to conquer. In the cure of Bronchitis, Severe Coughs, and the early stages of Consumption, it has astonished the medical faculty, and eminent physicians pronounce it the greatest medical discovery of the age. While it cures the severest coughs, it strengthens the system and purifies the blood. By its great and thorough blood-purifying properties, it cures all Humors, from the worst Scrofula to a common Blotch, Pimple, or Eruption. Mercurial disease, Mineral Poisons, and their effects, are eradicated, and vigorous health and a sound constitution established. Erysipelas, Salt Rheum, Fever Sores, Scaly or Rough Skin, in short, all the numerous diseases caused by bad blood, are conquered by this powerful purifying and invigorating medicine.
